Marriage Alters Persons for Good or Evil

Dear Girls:

It is a queer thing how very much alike the people who marry one another often become. And then when one thinks, there is nothing so queer about it after all.

I have seen happy-go-lucky fellows who thought well of everyone before their wedding day completely changed around after their matrimonial knot was tied, to a critical complaining woman. Not immediately, of course, but very gradually throughout the years, did the change come about.

I have seen grouchy, fault-finding sensitive men change for the better and really turn out to be fine, companionable fellows after associating with a woman of excellent disposition. And vice-versa.

In almost every case, however, the influence comes from both sides. Sometimes the fine qualities of each partner is transmitted to the other and sometimes it seems that only the mean, ugly traits are exchanged while the good in both parties is completely forgotten.

It is only natural that we acquire little mannerisms and expressions from people with whom we are associated day after day. This explains, I think, why so many married people resemble each other. The resemblance lies in the facial expression and in their unconsciously made gestures, rather than in the features.

This old world could become a much happier place in which to live if each woman who contemplated marriage would examine her's and her future husband's dispositions with an eye to the future and decide just what he had to give her and what she had to give him that would improve them both.

She might give him a brighter outlook on life, he might give to her a finer sense of honor and responsibility to people and things in general.

One might teach the other reverence, economy, broad mindedness and oh, many, many other things. But as some one has said, "hindsight is better than foresight," and who expects a bride and groom to examine each other's faults before the ceremony?

Yours,
LOUISA

MEDFORD—Seventy-five per cent of the Bartlett pear crop in Jackson county was thinned this year as the result of a campaign carried on by County Agent L. P. Wilcox, and the fruit has developed better than any time for the past five years.

Newspaper advertising serves two purposes, and that's why it is successful. It promotes sales impulses and directs the buyer to the particular seller.

Sarah Anne's Cooking Class

Jellied or frozen salads adapt themselves very well to any dinner or supper. They are light and colorful and are easily prepared the day before, and take only a few minutes for unmolding and arranging on beds of lettuce. In serving perfect salads several things should be kept in mind.

All ingredients should be cold. The salad greens must be dry and crisp. All meats, vegetable or other ingredients, should be cut in shapely pieces.

Care should be taken to select the right dressing for the salad.

Vegetable Salad

- 1 package lemon gelatin.
- 1 1/2 cup boiling water
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 cup shredded cabbage
- 1/2 cup cooked peas
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 2 tablespoons chopped green peppers.
- 1/2 cup diced carrots
