ENCOURAGING CRIME

Carelessness and stupidity on the part of the victims is responsible for much of the thieving and swindling which has reached such alarming proportions in this country, amounting to approximately two billions a year. Some of the specific weaknesses of our "easy marks" are pointed out by a leading criminologist, who enumerates cashing checks for strangers, leaving automobiles unprotected, carrying unnecessarily large sums of money, buying real estate without seeing it or investigating its title, investing in stocks and schemes without consulting a banker, trying to beat gamblers at their own games, lending money and extending credit to persons of doubtful honesty, and so on.

If people fail to exercise any caution whatever in these matters, no law or official action can effectively protect them from thieves, swindlers and dead beats.

While the punishment of swindlers often occurs, it usually happens too late to do the victim any good, so far as recovering his money or property is concerned.

Honest people have it in their own power to greatly reduce losses from the above mentioned causes, by merely exercising ordinary good judgment, instead of indulging in reckless practices which encourage crime.

TALK STIRS DISCORD

Every thoughtful person must be impressed time and again with the pernicious effects of loose talking and writing. Perhaps half of the enmities and antagonisms which beset the world might be traced directly to irresponsible and vicious talk.

Not only does it affect individuals, making enemies of people who ought to be friends, but it is productive of discord and even war among nations.

In the present unsettled and delicate state of world affairs a great injury to the interests of peace is being done by intemperate utterances of pseudo-statesmen, who recklessly disregard the views and sensibilities of other nations in order to impress home people with an exaggerated idea of their own patriotism. The United States has its full share of these gringos, who would imperil our international relations for the sake of popular applause and votes.

Too many of our newspapers illustrate the same tendency, through irritating editorial expressions which cause unfavorable reactions when reprinted in foreign countries and make the task of our diplomats increasingly difficult.

It goes without saying that we should always be found ready and willing to take a firm stand wherever our real interests are at stake, but this may be done in a sane and dignified manner without resorting to unnecessarily offensive tactics.

Statesmen and nationals of all countries might contribute measurably to the cause of peace by refraining from violent and ill-considered outbursts that tend to aggravate an already difficult problem.

The New York judge who declared that a man is master of his own home reflects little credit upon the wisdom of the judiciary.

Census reports show that there are 102 and a half men in this country for every 100 women. That half man is probably a radio crooner.

We read that Will Rogers is interested in a parachute factory. Probably senses a market among politicians who will be up in the air next year.

An investigating committee declares there is "widespread corruption" in New York City. Those investigators are simply finding out everything.

OREGON CLUB MEMBERS WIN NATIONAL HONORS

Four Oregon club boys won national honors for themselves and their state recently when they were named among the 15 clubbers in the 11 western states to receive $500 scholarships in the International Harvester company contest.

The Oregon winners and their club projects are John H. Welbes, of Portland, swine; Clifford Conrad, Imbler, swine; Stanley Green, Stanfield, sheep; and Randall Grimes, Harrisburg, dairy cattle. In addition three alternates were chosen, as follows: Kenneth Dahl, Silverton; Cal Monroe, Canby; and Barbara Dunn, Junction City.

These scholarships, which entitle each winner to $500 toward a course at the state agricultural college, are leaders of the country headed by provided through a $50,000 fund set aside for the purpose by the International Harvester company as a memorial to Cyrus Hall McCormick, a Virginia farm boy who gave the world its first successful grain reaper in 1831. The fund was divided into 100 scholarships of $500 each, and apportioned on a basis of club enrollment as follows: western states, 15; eastern states, 10; southern states, 35; and central states 40. With Oregon boys winning four, the remainder of the 15 allotted to the western states were distributed three to Colorado; two each to California and Washington and one each to Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico and Montana.

The winners were selected by a committee of civic and business men of the country headed by Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of the U. S. department of agriculture. The contest was conducted by the National Committee on Boys' and Girls' 4-H club work.

ON OREGON FARMS

BAKER—Baker county, formerly known mostly for its beef cattle and sheep, has doubled its dairy population during the past 10 years, and now has a total of 10,571 cows, according to P. T. Fortner, county agent.

ENTERPRISE—The Willows Livestock Shipping association is now completing its third and most successful year, with a total of 22,441 hogs, 1136 cattle and 14,573 cattle and sheep and lambs shipped for 811 different growers, bringing them $363,568, as compared to the first year when 2400 hogs, 35 cattle and 136 sheep were shipped for 174 growers, bringing them $43,290. These figures were taken from records in the office of N. C. Donaldson, county agent and secretary-manager of the association.

TOLEDO—E. L. Wilson of the Beaver Creek community has recently completed a 25 by 30 foot manure shed, using shakes for the roof and two inch planks for the sides, leaving one end open. The total cost of material amounted to not more than $20. Mr. Wilson reported to County Agent Conklin. Mr. Wilson has 35 head of cows and horses in the barn during the winter and believes the manure shed is going to be an important factor in building up the hill land on his farm.

EUGENE—Superphosphate applied to Ladino clover on the farm of M. A. Whiteaker in a demonstration trial in which he co-operated with County Agent O. S. Fletcher, brought no apparent increase of yield, he reports. The only evident results was that the clover was a little greener where the fertilizer was applied.

AMERICA'S WORLD RESPONSIBILITIES

By H. J. HAAS

President American Bankers Association

WE are in a changing world, with many new financial problems for which we have no precedents, and many old problems which have so changed as to be unrecognizable.

American bankers have been called into world affairs to blaze new trails of unknown finance. We may expect these calls to be more numerous in the future than they have in the past. We are the world's financial leader and we must accept the responsibility which goes with it.

Let us look to the future with confidence. Every one has experienced a great sorrow some time, perhaps so great we felt we could never overcome it, but time is the great healer and eventually we have come out of it. As it is with individuals, so it is with nations. Our nation has had much sorrow in the 155 years of its existence. In that time we have passed through the major depressions of 1837-1857-1873 to 1879-1884-1893-1896-1907-1914-1921 and the present.

I venture to state that in each of these periods there were those who had doubts of the future just as we have them today, but what happened after each depression? Our country recovered, to be better and stronger than ever. Its people were introduced to modes of living they never dreamed of, until today, notwithstanding our depression, we live on the highest plane of any nation in the world. Should we not judge the future by past experience?

Surely our people are better prepared, financially and intellectually, to cope with even greater problems than they have been in the past, so why not look to the future confident that fundamental social and economic problems will be adjusted satisfactorily?

Confidence is not established by any one thing but by an accumulation of things. If we can get confidence started on its way, gathering a little here and there, it will accelerate its speed as it goes along. This is not the work of any one man to perform but is the cumulative effort of each and every one of us. What we are in the future is not the result of what we have done on any one day but the result of all that we have done for all time. The American Bankers Association is endeavoring to do its part. Individually our efforts may not count for much, but they are part of the whole plan and taken in the aggregate amount to the sum total of

What Can Be Done

Farmers should rid themselves of any false hope of outside aid from legislation. The only recourse left for the producer on a reduced price level is to produce his goods at reduced costs, and nearly every farmer can likely put into force a few economies in production. Farmers must produce as largely as possible the materials they use, and get away from cash purchases until prices come down proportionately on the things they buy. The cheapest way in the farming business is to raise your own feed and not let the other man get your dollars.

NEW REPORT GIVES OIL SPRAY ADVICE

More complete suggestions regarding the use of oil sprays than ever before have just been made by the annual conference of state and government specialists who met at Spokane early this month to compare experimental data gathered over the last five years. Oregon was represented at the conference by R. H. Robinson, chemist of the experiment station, and LeRoy Childs, superintendent of the Hood River branch experiment station.

Use of the oil sprays has grown so rapidly in recent years, but has been complicated with so many dangers as well as possibilities, that the plan was arrived at several years ago of having an annual conference of specialists from five states, British Columbia, and the U. S. department of agriculture, to formulate uniform recommendations. Commercial spray men co-operate willingly in this plan.

The report issued by the conference will soon be adapted to local conditions in the various states and regions within states, and will soon be available for free distribution in this form from either the central experiment station at Corvallis or any of the branch experiment stations where fruit growing is practiced.

Under dormant sprays the conference reported that oil sprays have been found effective in control of such insects as San Jose scale, European red mite, brown mite, aphids, tree hoppers and fruit tree leaf roller. Lime sulfur, says the report, is effective for San Jose scale, blister mite, rust mite, peach twig borer, two-spotted mite, oyster-shell scale, California peach blight and peach leaf curl. Which one should be used will depend on the combination of insects and diseases to be controlled.

Summer oil sprays are chiefly used for controlling codling moth, red spiders and leaf hoppers. For codling moth the oil is used in combination with insecticides such as lead arsenate the report says, and one pound of lime per 100 gallons of water is added to prevent liberation of free arsenic which causes injury

Not long since the writer attended a religious meeting in a negro church. An old woman who was entering fervently into the services had a face though very black, yet wore an expression of spiritual beauty and exaltation. Honesty, sincerity, piety, and amiability shone from every lineament. She was an outstanding and rare type that a sculptor of the greatest skill would love to reproduce permanently in marble. Now what forces had operated to make that old black face so attractive? They came from within, as an ugly sneer. He was the embodiment of all that was evil, corrupt

Advises Budget for Martial Happiness

One woman of my acquaintance attributes her happily married life to the budget system.

"It seems funny, I know," she says, "to say that my happiness depends on a budget but it does. When John and I were first married we, like most couples of our time, failed to discuss financial affairs. I began to chafe the groceries, my clothes, drugs, etc., and before very long we were up to our ears in debt. Now, it is impossible for two people to have bill collectors calling at all times and to be happy. At the end of a year, relations between John and me became strained, to put it mildly. He felt that I had not been economical in the household management and I felt he had been extravagant in buying many luxuries which we could have well done without. More than that I was unable to tell whether we had bought all the things for which we had been charged.

Finally we agreed to live on a budget. We found out, within a few dollars, what John's income would be and on the first of each month he handed me over the money to run the house and another sum for my clothes and spending money. He took a like amount for his clothes and spending money and we banked the rest for doctor, dentist, insurance and savings. We made a rule never to touch that last item, regardless of how much we felt that we needed a fur coat or anything else we could not buy within our regular allowance. If I spent too much on groceries the first of the month we have beans and cheaper cuts of meat the latter part.

However that does not occur any more as I know what to expect and how to plan. If John wants to buy a box of cigars, I have nothing to say, as it comes out of his allowance and he has to deprive himself of something else in order to get them.

We have done away with that contentious question which wrecks more married lives than any other—that question of money. That is why I attribute my present happiness largely to the budget system". It sounds good doesn't it? Why not add this system to your list of New Years Resolutions?

Yours,
LOUISA

The life writes its story upon the face. Regular features and beautiful coloring alone does not make a beautiful woman. A wax figure may be perfect so far as those things are concerned, yet no one would give it a second glance, only out of curiosity it is the soul, the expression that creates real beauty.

The attributes and emotions write themselves upon the countenance, and, as the years go on they become so plain and indelible that even a simple child is attracted or repelled by them. The modes of life and thinking influence character and expression. Thought and habit pull and chisel the mobile muscles of the face. Evil thoughts constantly indulged send the impulses generated in the brain along the nerves to the muscles, which mould the expression of faces until they become wicked and repulsive.

An Italian painter sought for a beautiful child as a model for a cherub. One day he found a little toy that had the face of an angel, so lovely were the features and so innocent and pure the expression. He used him as the model for one of his most famous pictures.

When the artist was old he wanted one to represent a man fallen to the lowest depths of degradation and crime. He sought long before he discovered in the vilest slums, a decrepit creature without a vestige of nobility in his physiognomy. He was bent, toothless, bleary eyed. His loose, sensual lips twisted into a sneer. He was the embodiment of all that was evil, corrupt and sinister.

The artist engaged him as a model. Great was his astonishment on learning that he was the same one who had posed many years before as the lovely cherub. Wrong living, evil thinking and practices had transformed the child of matchless beauty and innocence into this hideous, repulsive, vicious looking old man.

"Be sure your sins will find you out," is an old saying. As the years march on they write their story in your face. You cannot always conceal what you are, for the little tell tale nerves and muscles transcribe every thought whether good or ill upon your countenance.

Refinement and kindness create an attractive expression. In previous articles you have been told that a fine complexion is largely dependent on the health, but remember that good looks can to a large extent be developed by our wills
