The Future Leaders

"Where would you look for the boys who will become leaders in business and politics?" was the question put the other day to the manager of a newsboys' club in a large city.

"I would find more of them in a club like mine than among the college students, was his prompt reply. "My boys come mostly from families that have little money, where life is a struggle. The experience and determination they gain in that struggle gives them a greater power of achievement than comes from mere book learning."

A newsboy sells papers by obtaining customers along his route or crying them on the street. To accomplish results, he must resolve to overcome the irresponsibility that is characteristic of the average boy. He must be forceful enough to attract attention yet, not so aggressive that he annoys possible customers.

As he triumphs over such problems, which are often too difficult for grown men, he is apt to develop a smiling and winsome manner that carries a person very far in this world. By meeting difficulties in their various occupations, young people prepare themselves for leadership.

There is no wisdom or sense in raising money by burdensome taxation and then throwing it away in foolish and uneconomical expenditures. If more thought were given to the wise expenditure of money, less would be necessary on devising new schemes to raise more money. It might be well to discard many of the things that have fastened themselves upon our government in times past. Many of the practices are wasteful, unnecessary and useless. While commissions are searching for new sources of revenue, let them give some time to the lopping off of the unnecessary expenditures with which government has become burdened.

An editor labors under the same difficulties as does the preacher. It often happens that when the preacher prepares a sermon for a certain member or group of his flock, none of those for whom the sermon is intended, take it to themselves. Someone whom the speaker did not have in mind at all takes it to himself. If often happens this way with the editor. The person for whom his shaft is intended, never pays any attention to it and someone whom the editor does not have in mind takes it to himself. The reason must be that the fellows who need correction are already so tough and hardened that nothing will get through their skins.

The people who do not dare trust the banks, seem more willing to trust the burglars.

If some folks didn't sign so many petitions, they might be able to sign more checks.

The politicians are said to steal each other's thunder, but the speed with which they act does not suggest that they steal anyone's lightning.

A headline says 2,000,000 kissed a saint's embalmed feet in 40 days in India; and yet there are people who think India should be free.

S. P. OFFER MAY DAY "CENT-A-MILE" RATES

May Day will be "dollar day" in rail transportation circles this year, it was made known today with an announcement by the Southern Pacific Company of plans for another offering of its famous "cent-a-mile" excursions.

Arrangements have just been completed by the company for a four-day sale of its low-cost roundtrips, according to the local agent for the railroad. The excursions will be operated from April 28 to May 1, inclusive, with return limit of May 10, of May 10, he said.

The territory to be included in the new "cent-a-mile" offer will cover Southern Pacific's lines from San Francisco to Ogden and Salt Lake City and from Portland to El Paso.

TUNNEL NEAR VAULT

Tucson, Ariz.—An underground tunnel, which led almost to a bank vault, has been discovered under the city's main street. Pioneers say it was dug by soldiers when Tucson was the only walled city in the Southwest and was intended to provide a refuge for the inhabitants in the event that the settlement should be captured by the Apaches.
