Large Percentage of Iron Found in Two Well Water Test made

Samples of water from the Lombard and Elco Dairy wells have been obtained by a committee composed of Mr. Cunningham, Councilman Marsh and Fordney, and tested for bacteria and chemicals. The test revealed a large amount of iron, especially in the Lombard sample.

Attorney Meyers read the two contracts for drilling submitted by Mr. Cunningham, at the special meeting this week, which were thoroughly discussed by the council. Mr. Jannsen represented the Jannsen drilling company in a proposition to drill an eight inch test well on an hourly basis. The rate is to be $1.50 an hour while drilling, until water is absolutely assured, then he would receive an additional $1.50 an hour. The city is to furnish all materials necessary for the test. After considerable discussion, Councilman Marsh suggested that a contract be drawn by Attorney Meyers, Mr. Cunningham and A. M. Jannsen or his attorney for the drilling of a eight inch test well, the location to be selected at a later date, and be submitted at the regular meeting of the council May 2nd.

A recommendation from G. A. Cobb and C. E. Hedge that a new city charter be drafted was accepted Boswell that a committee, chosen and the committee dismissed. A motion was made by Councilman from the civic organizations of the city, resulted in the recorder being instructed to correspond with the organizations on the matter.

Water accounts written off the ledger some time ago are to be turned to a collector, which will be selected by Recorder Richey. The water committee was asked to employ a party owing a delinquent water bill to cut the grass and make a general cleanup of property surrounding the city reservoir.

Two New Drugless Doctors Open Offices in Beaverton

Drs. O. F. and S. Etta Hiesley have opened offices in the Cady building. They are progressive and have taken up the newer methods of treating the sick. The profession is fast becoming drugless, using less drugs each year, as it is realized that preventative medicine is better. Proper foods builds strong healthy bodies and the successful physician of the future will have to prescribe foods instead of drugs. Another important factor in the treatment of many diseases are now treated successfully with it. It is seldom necessary to remove the tonsils as they can now be treated and reduced to normal. Goitre, heart fever, liver diseases, constipation, piles, female, kidney and stomach troubles are all treated successfully by electricity.

Many of the once so-called incurable diseases such as tuberculosis, and even some cases of cancer when taken in time, yield to the modern methods of treatment.

Senator Steiwer Tireless in Work for State

As the primary election draws near it becomes clear that Oregon citizens have no intention of changing representatives in the United States Senate. These are hazardous times in Oregon and in the nation, requiring experience and sound thinking in the Senate. Senator Steiwer has been tireless on behalf of better conditions for farming, lumbering, fisheries and other industrial interests. His handling of thousands of claims for war veterans, as well as his support of labor and unemployment measures, complete a record that makes the services of the Senator indispensable to Oregon. That is especially true because of the commanding positions he now occupies on the important Banking and Currency and Appropriations committees. He will be in a position for better service in the next six years. Added to those facts, he has youth, intelligence and a vast fund of information at his command. People who are solid on their feet recognize that the state will benefit by returning Senator Steiwer.

Mrs. James Bradley of Portland spent the week end visiting her sister Mrs. W. H. Engleke.

J. O. Bailey Especially Qualified as Candidate for Supreme Judge

J. O. BAILEY

Mr. Bailey is especially qualified by education, training and experience for the high judicial office which he seeks. He is fair and broadminded, well grounded in the law, familiar with trial and appellate procedure, fearless, studious, industrious and conscientious. In both public and private life he has rendered valuable service to the State and his community and is known as an independent thinker, and, as stated by Murray Wade, cartoonist of the Salem Capitol Journal, "is 100 per cent propaganda proof." In 1928 he received both the Republican and Democratic nominations for State Senator and at the general election in November, received 79,518 votes, the highest vote ever received in Oregon by any candidate for either house of the State Legislature.

Mr. Bailey is familiar with and interested in the entire State of Oregon. He has traveled it by stage, train, automobile, and airplane. He believes that law is, or should be, common sense and is, or should be, a progressive science, and that it is necessary to know people, their activities and problems, in order to properly construe the law. He also believes that the decisions of the Supreme Court should be clear, concise and to the point, that they should be a guide, to future transactions and dealings, rather than a hindrance; and that petitions for rehearing should be given careful consideration by all the judges who participated in the original decision.

The Oregon Voter, on October 24, 1931, in discussing possible candidates for the Supreme Court at the coming election, said reference to Mr. Bailey, as follows:

"Among those mentioned are Senator J. O. Bailey of Portland, who is 51, in the prime of physical vigor, a successful practicing attorney of high standing, an authority on constitutionality, a man of judicial temperament and with such a fine reputation for character and public service that he is proven vote-getter."

Respectfully submitted
Bailey for Supreme Court Judge Committee.
By Jay E. McCall, Secretary
Board of Trade Bldg., Portland, Ore.

Col. Clark Commended for Saving Four Lives

ALFRED E. CLARK

Among the many dramatic episodes of the World War, there is one that stands out conspicuously and is of interest to the people of Oregon and particularly to Oregon veterans, for the chief figure in the incident is a Portland man, Colonel Alfred E. Clark, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator.

Briefly stated Colonel Clark then assistant to the Judge Advocate General of the army was instrumental in saving the lives of four young soldiers, sentenced to be shot, two for disobeying orders and two for sleeping on post. He did this in the face of the bitterest opposition of high military authorities and as a result of his stand orders were promulgated governing such cases and the result was that during the war no American soldier was ever executed for a purely military offense. Details of the affair were touched upon briefly at the time by the press of the country but it was years later that the true story was told. Even at this time at important gatherings of ex-service men there always is some veteran who recalls the event.

Colonel Clark in his discussion of war matters has made only brief references to this incident and it has remained for "The Veteran" an ex-service men's publication, to tell of the successful fight he made on behalf of these four condemned men and the American soldier generally. "The four soldiers," says The Veteran, "ranged from 17 to 19 years of age, according to their enlistment papers. They had all enlisted at the time this country entered the war. Some, if not all, were younger than their enlistment papers showed. These boys had been sentenced to be shot and the sentences were approved with a strong recommendation that these sentences be carried out by way of punishment and in the interest of military discipline.

"The cases came to Washington for review and recommendation by the office of the Judge Advocate General before being passed to the president of the United States for final action. The records were reviewed and the sentences approved by several officers of high rank and then passed to the Judge Advocate General for his signature. However he referred them to Colonel Clark, in whom he had much confidence. Clark reached the conclusion that the sentences were unjust and that the evidence failed to prove the offenses charged. His opinions in these cases which later found their way into congressional hearings, must have shocked the higher military authorities whose recommendations were so vigorously assailed. It is not always healthy, in the army to disagree too violently with superior officers. It required a good deal of nerve—courage perhaps is the better word, to assert that conclusions and recommendations of the highest military authority are wholly unjust and without foundation. Clark punched holes in the evidence, criticized the conduct of the trial and said that "in each case the defense of the accused was so indifferent as to be practically no defense."

"He pointed out that two trials, separately conducted, lasted from 8:00 p. m. to 9:45 p. m., or but one hour and forty-five minutes to try, condemn and sentence two men to death, that in one counsel for the accused made an argument of six lines, and in the other eight lines. Clark concluded his opinion with the emphatic language that the proceedings make up a record on which it will be difficult if not impossible to defend or justify the execution of the death sentences by way of punishment or upon ground other than that as a
