How to Close the Jails

Of the 4,000 boys before a New York judge on their way to jail, reformatory, or parole, only three had belonged to a Sunday School.

The facts as recited is a powerful testimony for religious training of the young.

In a letter to Dr. George William Carter, general secretary of the New York Bible Society, reprinted in the Christian Observer (Presbyterian) Judge Lewis L. Fawcett, of the State Supreme Court, gives his experience of twenty-three years on the bench:

"Permit me to state that my experience during twenty-three years on the bench, in which time over 4,000 boys under the age of twenty-one years were convicted of crimes before me, of whom but three were members of a Sunday School, has satisfied me of the value of Sabbath Schools to the community, in helping safeguard it, to the extent to which Sabbath Schools exist, from the growth of criminals.

"My experience also satisfies me of their value to the individual.

"In 1,902 cases of suspended criminal sentences, in each of which a minister, priest or rabbi became interested at my request, only sixty-two boys were brought back for violation of the conditions of parole. I believe the reform in the remaining cases (over 1,000) was prompt and permanent.

"In fact, I regard our Sabbath Schools, including those of all faiths, as the only effective means to stem the rising tide of vice and crime among our youth. Society carries the heavy burden of criminality chiefly because of the lack of religious training of the youth.

"If all the children could be kept under the influence of the Sabbath School, and the grownups were active in some church, we could close our prisons and jails, instead of being compelled to enlarge and increase their number.

"The problem of youth is the problem of humanity. There are over 17,000,000 boys and girls in this country growing up without moral training of any source—Protestant, Catholic, or Jewish.

"May your labor of love in teaching God to the children be fraught with most glorious results through their salvation and their work in His cause in the years to come."

"With such unquestioned evidence before them of the value of religious training," comments The Christian Observer, "is it not strange that parents are willing to neglect this vital feature of home and church training?"—Literary Digest.

America Will Come Back

The political leaders in Washington have been told that Congress must do something for the unemployed before adjournment.

That there exists a demand for positive action is plain. That the need is urgent is plainer. What to do under the circumstances is harder to answer and more difficult to effect.

One thing, however, is within the reach of every citizen. That is the maintenance of faith in the fundamental recovery of this great republic. It will see brighter days again, happier people and prosperous eras. The going may be rough but the haven is ahead, even though the journey may be long and the way obscured.

Those who believe in the rule of the people do not necessarily think that the voice of the people is the voice of God.

When it comes to reducing taxes most taxpayers run into big bond issues floated when all of us were rich, and that is an obligation that even a hungry taxpayer can't eat.

Looking at Washington

ted the President represented only a minority of railroad labor.

Just before receiving the plea of the railroad men, President Hoover issued a statement opposing the public works bond issue, emphasizing self-liquidating construction projects and relief loans to states and vigorously upheld the use of emergency measures to "fight the depression the misery and suffering." Having "no taste for any such emergency powers," and believing that with a return of confidence "there will be no need to exercise" them, the President nevertheless hinted that they might be resorted to, if necessary.

In opposing the proposal to issue bonds to finance a self-liquidating construction project, the President sought an agreement upon a plan to extend the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation so that it can (1) loan $300,000,000 to the states for direct relief, (2) use $40,000,000 to aid agricultural exports, and, (3) lend $1,160,000,000 to private business for reproduction enterprises. The Democratic plan, as outlined unofficially, included items (1) and (2), with (3) an "undetermined sum" and added (4) $1,100,000,000 for the public works program. Difference in financing plans involved the choice of a bond issue, sponsored by the Democrats, and the use of R. C. F. debentures advocated by the President.

The fact that both parties admit the imperative need of action is the only encouraging factor. Since neither party controls Congress the Republicans cannot pass the President's program, and while the Democrats and insurgents might possibly enact the other program a prompt veto cannot be overridden. In other words if anything is done there must be a compromise between the divided camps. The President's opposition to a bond issue for public works is matched by the reluctance of many Democrats to agree that the government should loan a billion dollars to private businesses.

However, this outline of the situation is complicated by various blocs, some of which are not concerned with the methods adopted to raise the funds if work is provided for unemployed. Moreover, difficulties arise in making loans to states, because some of them are not in a position to borrow. Others would vote as much as $5,000,000,000 for public works, regardless of whether the construction involves self-liquidating projects, such as tunnels, bridges, etc., or not.

In spite of the difficulties of reaching agreement, leaders still hope for adjournment early next month. They know that Congress has a way of suddenly untying itself from "impossible" legislative snarls and that politicians want nothing less than a prolonged summer session. Nevertheless, House leaders have bluntly informed senators that there will be no adjournment until tax, economy and appropriation bills are enacted.

Something novel was the address of W. Irving Glover, Assistant Postmaster General, who according to press reports told Missouri postmasters to "get out on the firing line" for President Hoover, and warned that he would be "glad to take the resignations" of any "postmasters who don't want to do it." This bold demand caused criticism in Washington, where Senator Norris said the President should repudiate "these sentiments" and retire Mr. Glover, who denied saying all the remarks attributed to him but declared he "had a perfect right to tell them to work for President Hoover."

A House committee requests the President to call an international monetary conference where the silver problem would be discussed. Abandonment of the gold standard is not advised, although plans to restore silver as a medium of exchange are held essential to world economic rehabilitation. However, there are many who insist that silver must be restored as a "basic money" before the world will be able to come out of the trade slump.

Reports from Lima, Peru, are that Mexico, Peru, Chile and other republics have been exchanging views for some time in preparation for what the Foreign Minister, Freundt, of Peru, calls a "frank, open struggle with the United States Congress." He says the proposed duty on copper would mean "absolute ruin to Peru and Chile" and that, it is necessary to "fight to the last ditch." Several years ago a proposed customs union against this country was proposed by Argentina, but failed because Chile and Peru remained aloof. Peru had a bill pending to levy a 300 per cent duty on all imports from the United States.

The Forestry club met Tuesday evening and participated in a hike. Next week Thursday the club will meet at the home of Mrs. Laura Mack at 6:30 a. m. to prepare for a campfire breakfast.

School was closed for the summer vacation period last Friday noon.

MANY WILL ATTEND 4-H CLUB SCHOOL

With reservations for the annual 4-H club summer session already in from 33 of the 26 Oregon counties, a of a year ago when 725 enrolled, is high attendance, approximating that assured for the two-weeks period on the Oregon State college campus. The dates this year will be June 13 to 25 which is one week later than last year, overlapping the regular adult summer session by one week.

Estimates of attendance at first were somewhat under last year but later reports from the counties indicate that some are sending more than a year ago which will apparently balance the reduced delegations from other counties, according to H. C. Seymour, state club leader. Last year there were 725 actual club members present in addition to some 75 leaders who assisted in the school.

In line with the general lowered costs, particularly of food, the charge for board and room for the two weeks period this year has been reduced from $15 to $13. The girls will reside in Waldo and Kidder halls, as usual, and the boys will live in the men's dormitory.

The program calls for about four hours of classroom and field instruction each day except Sunday, but varied so as to meet all interests and avoid monotony. Physical recreation is always a prominent feature of the session with indoor and outdoor sports carried out under expert supervision.

Assembly programs will again be important feature of the club sessions with prominent officials and business men scheduled for each day, affording club members an opportunity to come in touch with people in important places of leadership.

Applications for admission to the session need to be in by June 1, to be sure of being acted upon. Those who have not won trips through their work at county or state fairs or other awards and who now seek admission are advised to make arrangements through the person in their county in charge of directing 4-H club work.

DREAMING

By EDNA BLANKEN

"Gee, this life is soft," Ann exclaimed as she stepped in a luxurious automobile wearing a fur coat. "To the Art Museum, Charles," she directed. As they drove on Ann thought of her pals in school pouring over Geography, Arithmetic and History. "This kind of study is much better," she murmured. Her daily trip to the museum was entertaining as well as instructive. When she arrived at the museum some well dressed men were examining a painting. Ann was studying a nearby painting when one man said to the other, "Mr. Miner, I think this painting would be lovely in your home." "Yes, Mr. Snow, that surely is a fine painting." Oh, thought Ann some of my home town celebrities are here today. She walked around studying other paintings for a while and then went to her automobile.

"Drive around for a few miles and then home, Charles." As they were driving through the business section of town Ann saw a lovely blue gown in a neat appearing shop. "Stop, Charles, I must have that gown." As she entered the shop she heard the saleswoman exclaim "That gown looks beautiful on you Mrs. South." Oh, another celebrate, thought Ann. After buying the gown she went back to her automobile and then home.

"Get up," shouted Anne's mother from the bottom of the stairs.

"Oh mother, have I been dreaming," Ann asked sleepily.

"I guess so. But hurry up you have to do your arithmetic before school."

"All right," sighed Ann, "Oh, what a life."

HOPPERS INVADE WEST

Washington—Millions of grasshoppers are pouring out of warm soil of the great Northwest and the wingless young are beginning to crawl over the southern edge of 10,000,000 acres expected to be infested.

Federal entomologists predict that it will be the greatest crop pest of the 1932 season. Ten days after they hatch, the grasshoppers take wings and then follow four to six weeks of ever-widening destruction. Federal funds are being sought to buy bait to poison the insects but fear is expressed that the aid will be too late. Extremely warm, dry weather will cause the horde to begin its destruction immediately.

A Law Course Which Will Help You Pass the Bar

Become a lawyer and earn a lawyer's big fees. Some lawyers have earned as much as a million dollars in a single case.

You can prepare in your spare time at home through the Blackstone Legal Training Course and Service, which contains sufficient instruction in law to pass the legal examination for the bar. The LL. B. degree is conferred upon graduation.

The Blackstone course was prepared by 80 of the most eminent legal authorities in the United States included in the list of authors of text materials are such men as Justice George Sutherland of the United States Supreme Court. The course is endorsed and recommended by leading law and commerce schools as the foremost non-resident law course in the country. It is arranged in a way that makes law the most fascinating of all home-study courses. Easy to grasp—interesting—practical—complete.

50,000 students have been enrolled. Hundreds of them have been admitted to the bar and are today successful lawyers and judges. Thousands of others have been fitted for bigger and better positions in business. Regardless of the kind of work in which you are engaged—whether you are an accountant, salesman, banker or executive—a knowledge of law will pave the way for bigger responsibilities and increased income.

Write for Free Book

Write today for a free copy of our book, "The Law Trained Man," which tells about the successes which have come to Blackstone students through the home reading of law. In addition, the book contains a full description of the Blackstone Legal Training Course and Service, and also gives many helpful legal pointers that will be of value to you in your everyday work. It answers such important questions, as "Must an agreement, to be binding, always be in writing?" "Does a receipt in full protect the holder against further demands?" etc.

The legal illustrations it contains, written in story form, may be the means of saving you thousands of dollars. The book is yours, free, for the day—NOW—there is no obligation.
