SHIPPERS WARNED BY RAILROAD COMMISSION IN TRUCK LINE CASES

Holding shippers equally liable to a punishment for misuse of the public highways in the transportation of freight, the California State Railroad Commission has unseathed a new and powerful weapon in its fight to curb the activities of so-called "wildcat" truck operators, it was disclosed here today.

The commission's readiness at this time to exert its full authority by proceeding against those who "aid and abet" violations of the laws governing truck lines was declared emphatically in decisions finding five truck owners and companies guilty of operating without permits.

It was held, according to the announcement, that the truck owners in question were operating illegally as common carriers, in competition with certificated motor lines and railroads. They were ordered to cease operations.

Particular attention was called to the fact that a violation of the order would constitute contempt, punishable by fine or imprisonment, and that persons patronizing illegal truck lines are also subject to penalties provided by law. The commission directed that copies of the order be served on shippers involved in the cases.

By taking cognizance for the first time of violations of the law by shippers as well as "wildcat" truck operators, the commission indicated its intention to take drastic action to protect the interests of the state and its legalized carriers against unlawful and ruinous competition, according to word received here.

JAMES DAVIDSON SCORES PERFECT IN CATTLE JUDGING CONTEST

James Davidson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Davidson of Helvatia, was one of three boys attending this year 4-H club summer school at Corvallis who scored perfect in the dairy cattle judging contest, held in connection with the summer school. As a special recognition of this achievement the Purina Mills of St. Louis, Missouri, through Earl A. Sinduse of their educational division is awarding each of the boys a Purina hand axe.

The hand axe is a size every boy wants and is stamped with the regular red and silver checker board brand of the Purina Mills. This company has been a loyal supporter of 4-H club work thru the United States and this award came unsolicited to these boys. James was very much pleased, surprised and delighted when W. S. Averill assistant county agent presented him with the gift.

4-H club boys and girls are each year stepping further up the ladder of success and are each year bringing more honor to Washington county through their outstanding achievements.

EGGS $5 PER DOZEN

Each year the State Fair offers new and interesting features for young and old.

Among other novel introductions and particularly interesting features will be educational to farmers and housewives as well; to the farmer as an aid to standardizing for marketing, to the housewife as an aid in purchasing and comparison of grades. The result will be better prices to the farmers for their better grades and a displayed market of assorted grades for the benefit of the purchasers.

As a result of the cooperation of the Oregon State college, the Pacific Poultry Cooperative, and many individuals, assurance is given us that the Egg Show will be a real success. An exhibit of one dozen eggs is invited from every egg producer in Oregon. The Score Card to be mailed to each exhibitor will point out all defects. This alone will amply repay exhibitors for their trouble, but substantial cash prizes are also given. The best dozen gets $5.

APPLICATIONS DISCOURAGED

Hillsboro, Aug. 19—Heavy applications of commercial fertilizer on land lacking in humus and otherwise in poor condition is a losing proposition, believes County Agent W. F. Cyrus after examining tests made by growers of spinach and peas here who tried out the plan. Results indicated that unless the soil is in a fairly good state of fertility the yields of these crops will be disappointing even with liberal supplies of commercial fertilizer.

Mothers Who Teach Children to Tell Lies

Dear Girls: In my last letter I spoke of the importance of setting an example to our children in control and this week I want to write a few words about teaching them to be truthful in the same manner.

It is ridiculous how many mothers—and fathers for that matter—there are, who will punish a child for telling a lie and will then deliberately prevaricate, themselves, before these same children.

I know one mother who gleefully related how she ordered expensive handworked infant clothes from a shop and after copying the patterns, returned them saying they were not the right sizes. Her little girl listened with wide open eyes and smiled appreciatively over her mother's cleverness.

Another woman, who has a small child of eight, always gives her age to the conductor as five. Another mother teaches her little son to tell callers she doesn't care to see that she has gone "down town."

There are other mothers who make promises to their children and then break them without a qualm. They promise to take them to the pool or to the movies, etc., and then when the time comes it is either too cold or they have been invited to play bridge. Breaking a promise to a child without a very good reason, indeed, is really a terrible thing to do. Besides being a disappointment to him, it not only teaches him to disregard the truth but to lose respect for you and to put no faith in what you may say in the future.

I want my children to know that they may depend on what I say and to feel that I am expecting the same of them.

We certainly cannot expect children who have been brought up in an atmosphere of white lies to have a high regard for absolute truthfulness.

Truth is, indeed, a virtue that must be taught by precept and example.
