SMOOT-HAWLEY BILL HAS MATERIALLY LESSENED INCOMES

"The tariff policies of the Hoover and preceding Republican administrations of the last 10 years, as expressed in the Fordney-McCumber tariff act of 1922, and the Smoot-Hawley tariff act of 1930, have injured our industrial workers and contributed heavily to the collapse of our national prosperity. Let us not forget the tragic trail of commercial consequences."

These statements were made by United States Senator Edward P. Costigan of Colorado, who from 1917 until 1928 served as a member of the United States tariff commission. In recent interview with Edward B. Aldrich, editor of the Pendleton East Oregonian.

"The Republican post war tariff program of America against the world," Costigan continued, "was definitely charted in 1922 under President Harding. The latest President from Ohio still talked the reciprocity language of President McKinley, but his actions, as his death drew near, pointed more and more toward Chinese wall isolation."

Let us review some facts since President Hoover signed the tariff act of 1930. More than 1000 of America's leading economists protested against that measure and predicted that if signed it would destroy much of our foreign commerce, increase unemployment, injure agriculture and result in wasteful retaliation by foreign countries. What has happened since? Unemployment—now numbering in excess of 11,000,000 Americans—has steadily grown. A year ago the figures were approximately half as large as today, and when the tariff act of 1930 was signed they were substantially less.

"The Smoot-Hawley law led to retaliatory tariffs which lessened our commerce and foreign markets for farm and factory products. Our total foreign commerce has declined not in millions, but in billions of dollars."

"Western farmers, stockmen, manufacturers and other producers have no more fear from a proper application of the Democratic plan for a competitive tariff than from an honest application of the Republican theory of a cost-of-production tariff. In principle the two tariff standards are almost indistinguishable. Both the Democratic and Republican standards seek to permit our industries and growers to carry on successful competition with foreign industries and producers, but in actual practice, the Republican tariff policy has been used so excessively and unfairly that it has brought about harm rather than benefits."

J. B. King, Paris hair store, 404 Morrison street near Tenth, who has been in Portland for nine years, is in the beauty business. Mr. King was born in Hungary and started the beauty profession as an apprentice at 13. He served four years as apprentice and there learned the art of the barber trade, ladies' hair dressing and dentistry. Also some elementary surgery and medicine. There are very few beauty parlors who have of later years taken up the profession, who have as thorough training or who take such a pride in their profession as has Mr. King. He loves the skill of the old art as well as the enumeration. Bring any of your beauty or hair problems and he will give the benefit of his experience and advise gratis as far as in his power. KIWANIS HOLDS LADIES' NIGHT

Wednesday night was ladies' night at the Kiwanis meeting, which was held at the Driftwood Inn, in Raymond's oak grove. About 30 members were present. The guests for the evening were Hal Hoss and Ray H. Wise-carver, present incumbent and Democratic candidate, respectively, for Secretary of State in the coming election. Both addressed the meeting. Mr. Hoss explained the signaling and other features of the traffic laws. He announced that a drivers' license school of examination will be held in Beaverton on Monday, October 31, in the Chamber of Commerce room of the bank building.

Mrs. Leland Shaw of Portland was hostess at a luncheon on Tuesday of this week, her guests being Mrs. George Thym, Mrs. Nelson Walker, Mrs. W. H. Engelke and Mrs. Dan Shaw. Cards were enjoyed during the afternoon with Mrs. Shaw winning high score.

Washington County Pomona meet in the Hillsboro Grange hall Wednesday with an all-day meeting. Nineteen members of Beaverton Grange attended. The next meeting will be held in January at Aloha.

Oregon Voters Should Tax Oleo

Measure number 306 is one of the most important and most vital questions to be answered by the people of Oregon at the November election. Its importance has somewhat been overshadowed by other measures with more spectacular appeal, but for lasting benefit to the state, the sustaining of employment and the increase in Oregon payrolls, Oregon must support number 306 with a firm yes vote.

From the standpoint of employment there is no comparison in the values of the two sides to the question. Over 50,000 men and women, at least 41,000 of whom are producing dairymen, are employed in the state's dairy industry. These men are mainly taxpayers, as the industry itself has an investment in land, cattle, buildings and farm dairy equipment of over $250,000,000. Every line of industry in the state is affected by the prosperity of the dairy industry as it is noted that those sections where dairying predominates have withstood the depression the best and that banks in these sections have been the least hard pressed. Dairy dollars are daily dollars and the community backed by dairy cows has always been fortunate, especially so during times of depression.

Against the 50,000 men and women engaged in the dairy industry not more than 30 men are employed by the tropical oil interests in the manufacture of a butter substitute in Oregon, according to statements made by representatives of this business.

No taxes are paid direct to the state by a large amount of the output of this product, as it is produced in factories in California and other states. Thus Oregon is unable to collect or assess taxes against these plants. The coconut oil or copra comes into this country duty free—the product is manufactured in another state. The result is tax dodging in its worst form.

Passage of similar measures in all other Pacific Northwest states has not caused a raise in the price of butter to the consumer. Similar laws are in effect in all Northwest states. Washington passed a 15-cent tax on oleo over two years ago and the oleo interests are not trying to get it set aside, feeling that the people of Washington value their dairy industry too highly to defeat its best interests. In Canada, New Zealand and Australia the sale of oleo is prohibited by law, yet the price of butter is about on a parity with Oregon's prices, exchange rates considered.

What the sustaining of this tax will do is to provide a market upon which all products are selling on a tax equal basis. It will give employment to many more dairymen and provide a market for the produce of many more cattle. It will help keep Oregon dollars in Oregon and will provide a living wage for many more people in addition to the 50,000 or more now employed.

Eastern Star Meeting Well Attended

The regular meeting of the Eastern Star was held Wednesday evening with a very good attendance. There were also several visitors from other chapters. An interesting feature of the evening was the exemplification of the obligation ceremony by the officers of the chapter. Dr. Daniel O. Webster, past grand patron of the state of Oregon, was the main speaker of the evening.

BEAVERTON HIGH SCHOOL ROUTES TIGARD, 18 TO 0

The Beaverton gridiron specialists hung another scalp to their belts Friday afternoon by defeating the Tigard team 18 to 0.

Three long runs were the sensation of the game, two resulting in touchdowns. The first one, 80 yards in length, and the third 50 yards, was made by George Brandel, the sensational Beaverton quarterback. The other run was made by Joe Vitlick, the Beaverton halfback, was for 40 yards, where he was stopped on the two-yard line.

This Friday, October 28, Beaverton plays Hillsboro. This game will be close and hard because both teams are so evenly matched. So far Hillsboro has not lost a game while Beaverton has lost two. However, the Beaverton lads are not handicapped by injuries as before, and believe they stand a good chance of winning.

OBSERVE WASHINGTON BICENTENNIAL DATE ON NAVY DAY

Navy day this year has a special significance since it occurs during the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

Naval authorities, in co-operation with the United States George Washington bicentennial commission, have made arrangements for an unprecedented, nation-wide celebration on October 27, with special emphasis on George Washington and his relation to the founding and growth of the United States navy.

Both the National and Columbia Broadcasting systems will carry special Navy day programs over a nationwide hookup. The principal speakers on these programs will be Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, and Congressman Sol Bloom, associate director of the United States George Washington bicentennial commission.

Special committees for the celebration of Navy day have been appointed in every state of the Union to supervise the Navy day exercises in their respective states. Thousands of local programs are scheduled to take place throughout the land.

Because of George Washington's outstanding greatness as a military commander and as a statesman, the United States George Washington bicentennial commission points out that his achievements as a naval strategist and leader have been overshadowed.

In the past few years historians of the United States George Washington bicentennial commission and other scholars have been searching the records of our early history and have reevaluated the significant events of Washington's period. A new conception of George Washington has been presented.

Because of this tremendous work, scholars of note are now agreed that George Washington takes his place in history as a naval genius as well as a military genius. He ranks with the great American naval leaders.

George Washington was not a naval genius because of any technical proficiency. We are told by the bicentennial commission that he knew very little about seamanship. He takes his place as a great naval leader because he saw more clearly than any officer engaged on either side, the tremendous possibilities of the navy and the importance of synchronizing the movements of the army and navy.

When the French fleet did not have supremacy on the seas Washington refused to engage his troops in an important battle. He was content to wait until he had the naval advantage. He refused to use Rochambeau's army until the French navy was ready.

The result of his clear thinking and vision was evidenced in the Yorktown campaign. Because of the great team work of the land and naval forces, Cornwallis was bottled up at Yorktown and was forced to surrender with his entire army. So crushing was the defeat that the war for American independence was, to all intents and purposes, over.

STATE TO GIVE DRIVERS EXAMINATION NOVEMBER 1

A special examination for driver's license will be given at the Chamber of Commerce building on November 1. This examination is open to everyone wishing to secure their new license and should take advantage of this opportunity. This trip on the part of the department of state is a special one because many in this community find it hard to get to Portland to take the examination.

Anyone wishing to take this examination should call at Stipes garage or at the Enterprise office and get a copy of the Oregon Motorists' Manual, giving all the rules and regulations required by Oregon laws. The questions will be based on the information in the manual.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Thirteen scouts and three visitors were present at the regular meeting on Friday, October 21, with Mr. Phelps the scout master, present. Several games of "Spud" were played during the evening and were great enjoyed. No scouts were awarded in the Inner patrol contest on account of the small number of scouts present. The Pine Tree patrol is still leading in the contest. Three scouts attended the court of honor held in Portland Thursday, October 20. Lysle Walker received pioneering and reading merit badges. Carl Curtis Beach received merits in music and carpentry and Robert Engelke became a star scout.
