Closing The Nations Banks

Clothed with greater power than that accorded any peace time president, President Roosevelt closed the banks of the United States until Congress could enact laws which would restore the confidence of the people in their banks.

This drastic action is intended to safeguard deposits now in banks, but, as far as we can see, it will not make good deposits that are already depreciated in unsound banks. It will, however, weed out unsafe banks and permit sound financial institutions to reopen with ample backing that there will be no lack of cash with which to meet the demands of their depositors.

A new national currency, backed by government bonds, or sound paper, will be distributed in order that there may be an "adequate" currency. When we realize that there was about $6,000,000,000 in currency and that depositors throughout the United States were asking the banks to pay a large portion of the $42,000,000,000 on deposit, we can easily see the impossibility of meeting these demands unless the people returned their money to circulation. This they were not doing.

Rather than permit the panic-stricken depositors to take all the currency and leave the other depositors holding the bag, drastic action was necessary and it was promptly taken by the new President. Hardly had he taken his oath of office before he issued the proclamation declaring a moratorium on banking until the atmosphere can be cleared of suspicion and a spirit of confidence created.

The process will be painful, but there are evidences that it will be the first step of many that must be taken to reorganize the nation's economic structure.

The Emden's Name Plate

In November, 1913, the Australian battle cruiser Sydney surprised and battered to pieces the weaker Emden, warship-raider of the Imperial German Navy.

Eighteen years afterwards in London an Australian high commissioner presented to the German republic the name plate of the captured vessel:

"Alone and unsupported," he said, "in the vast spaces of the Pacific and surrounded by overwhelming hostile forces, the Emden played a part that must have stirred the hearts of the German people and which wrung a tribute of respect even from those who opposed her. With the passage of the years there has been a growing sentiment in Australia that our feelings of respect and admiration should be expressed to the people of Germany in tangible and enduring form."

Baseball is nearly here and the first game of the season ought to have a psychological effect upon the depression, especially if the home team wins.

Some day the people in any number of little towns will appreciate the bankers who did not speculate.

Well folks the people of the United States have whipped worse enemies than the present depression and they will overcome it.

Now is the time to plant a spring garden unless you intend to disappoint the neighbor's chickens.

There are people who still consider it very important to figure out the last jig-saw puzzle.

So far, farm relief is yet to reach the farmers.

Public Again Warned Regarding Insurance

Salem, Oregon, March 17—State Insurance Commissioner A. H. Averill has again issued to the Oregon public a warning to be on its guard with reference to the solicitations of insurance of any kind or form by unknown companies or by individuals not licensed nor authorized to transact an insurance business under the Oregon law and under state supervision.

Oregon citizens, before being misled by non-admitted companies, should make inquiries of the insurance department or of one of their local insurance agencies and be sure that the insurance purchased gives them the protection they desire.

Oregon Senators Given Place on Committee

Senator McNary has been chosen Minority Leader of the Senate and he maintains his membership on the Committees on Agriculture and Forestry, Commerce, Irrigation and Reclamation, Manufacturers, and Territories and Insular Affairs.

Senator Steiwer has been made a member of the unofficial Committee on Committees and has been placed on the powerful Rules Committee.

His other committee assignments include appropriations, banking and records are Gertrude of Ranier View Currency (to which banking measures and the majority of relief legislation is assigned), Public Lands and Indian Affairs.

MONEY, BANKS AND FEAR THE CAUSE OF HOARDING

The grocery stores have enough food to care for the normal needs of the people here and sources from which to replenish their stocks. In this country, everybody knows that there is abundant food. However, if an unreasonable fear of starvation suddenly became prevalent and our citizens at tempted to buy up enough food to last them for an unreasonable time, there would soon exist a shortage of food. If this process was repeated in all sections of the United States, we would soon have a hoarding of food and resulting shortage and face the possible starvation of some of our citizens with out means to safeguard their future requirements.

The example may be a little far-fetched but it would not be an absurdity if our people happened to be seized by an unreasonable fear as to the future acquisition of food. They would become panic-stricken, there would be rash seizures of foodstuffs, the distribution and sale of food would be disrupted and suffering would stalk throughout the land. The only thing that prevents such a condition today is the fact that everybody knows that there is food aplenty and to spare in this country.

The same applies to money and our present plight would be remedied almost at once if our people would only believe the record which shows that there is available ample money to meet the legitimate and current needs of our business and commerce. However if because of hoarding on the part of individuals, bankers and investors, there is created a shortage, the reader may be assured that relief measures will provide additional mediums of exchange.

There is another phase of the banking situation to be considered. Millions of people in the United States have deposited their money in banking institutions, receiving in return a bank credit. They have been shocked and amazed by the revelations of rascality on the part of some of the nation's largest bankers and investment financiers. They have seen the value of stocks, land and all commodities sink to low levels and fear that their bank credits will be wiped out if a show-down comes. They then yield to the temptation to grab their first and leave others holding the bag for the final day of reckoning.

Clear thinking should convince them that they are hastening the dread contingency that frightens them. However, they are in no mood to think clearly—they are frightened, desperate and selfish. They act for themselves without faith in anybody or anything.

Against them is a mass of other individuals who have kept their heads, carried on business as usual and were, and still are willing to conduct their financial affairs in a normal manner. These people, however, face destruction through the precipitate demands of the panic-stricken element and, in order that all may share alike, and receive the just sums that are due them, it became necessary for the government to step in by law, stop the selfish hoarding of money and protect the interests of all alike.

The banking moratorium does this by preventing the depletion of the nation's currency through withdrawal and hoarding but retains it in the financial system which serves our economic body in the same manner that the bloodstream maintains the human being.

Our people should respond to this drastic action and cooperate in any measures that are taken by wise, patriotic and unselfish leaders. Those who through fear or unselfishness are unwilling to cooperate should, and will be compelled to do so by law.

Study Program Provided for Those Not Able to attend Different Universities

University of Oregon, Eugene—Young people here and throughout the state who under normal conditions would be attending the university, state college, or one of the normal schools, but who have been forced to discontinue their formal education are urged in a letter sent out this week from Dr. W. J. Kerr, Chancellor of higher education, to carry on studies in their homes through reading courses.

Cooperating in the movement will be the State library, State College, the University and the Normal Schools. The project will have as its basis well-organized reading courses, which will be made up by faculty members of the institutions of higher education and distributed through the office of Miss Harriet C. Long, state librarian at Salem. The reading will cover in part the work offered in various regular classes.

Students interested are requested to notify Miss Harriet C. Long, state librarian, Salem, who will furnish lists and other information.

Red Berry "Disease" Fought

MEDFORD—Southern Oregon berry growers have been warned by County Agent Wilcox to guard against loss from the so-called red berry disease that caused so much loss in parts of the Willamette valley several years ago. This disease, caused by a microscopic mite that works into the buds of blackberries and Himalaya berries, halting their maturity at the red stage. Spraying with liquid lime-sulfur in advance of the opening of the buds is a successful control measure.

MAIN DISH SPECIALS FOR FRIDAY

For Friday night suppers, and on other days, too, a delicious hot fish dish is a welcome variation to the diet. Fish is considered one of the low-cost foods, because in most localities fish of some kind are apt to be cheap at any time of the year. Fish has high food value too, which means more than being a mere item for low-cost meals.

Besides being a nutritious food, canned fish is labor saving. There are innumerable ways of serving it—in sandwiches, salads, and in combination with other foods. It may be chowders, patties or croquettes are all favorites. A delicious sandwich can be made in this fashion: On well buttered slices of bread, toasted on one side only, place a layer of fish (left over or canned) then a thin slice of tomato. Top this with quick melting cheese and place in a moderate oven just long enough for the cheese to melt, and they are ready for a hungry family.

Other favorite fish recipes are:

Fish Souffle

1 cup milk, 2 1-2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup soft bread crumbs, Pepper, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 cups salmon or halibut, (cooked) 3 eggs.

Prepare a white sauce of the milk, flour, salt and pepper. Remove the skin and bones from fish. Chop meat until fine, and add lemon juice. Add the beaten egg yolks to the white sauce and into this fold the fish and bread crumbs. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold carefully into fish mixture. Turn into buttered baking cups and set in a pan that contains hot water that comes to an inch below the top of the cups. Bake for half an hour in a moderate oven (375 deg.) or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Turn out on a hot platter, garnish with sprigs of parsley and wedges of lemon. Serve with any desired fish sauce. A well-seasoned tomato sauce is particularly good.

Creamed Peas and Salmon

1 No. 2 can peas, 1 pound can salmon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 pint milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, Pepper, Crisp toast.

Drain the peas. Flake the salmon remove bones and skin, and add the lemon juice. Make a sauce with the butter, flour and milk, add salt and pepper, and cook until thickened. Stir in the peas and salmon, adding more salt if needed, and when hot, serve on slices of crisp toast.

Scalloped Salmon

1 lb can salmon, (2 cups), 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 1-2 cups milk, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup buttered bread crumbs.

Break salmon into pieces, remove bones. Prepare sauce of butter, flour milk, salt. Place layer of salmon in bottom of buttered baking dish, add some of sauce, then another layer salmon, etc. Cover top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven until sauce bubbles up and the crumbs are brown.

A Little of Everything

The sun shines pleasantly. The first robin appears. Ditto the March hare. We don the athletic knee lengths. We run for cover. We sneeze—and sneeze—and sneeze. We buy quinine. We feel all right in the morning. We fare forth in overcoat, rubbers and umbrella. We almost roast, leave the umbrella in a restaurant, rubbers and coat at the office, run home in a blizzard. That's March all over, Mabel. It's a great life.

But it's pleasant enough in our shop, where we do a lot of good printing for people who understand and demand that class of work—regardless of the weather.
