"Spooky Tavern" to be Presented at Aloha

The thrilling 3 act mystery play "Spooky Tavern" which was recently produced at Hazeldale, will in response to universal request, be repeated on Thursday evening, August 10, in the large auditorium of the Grange hall at Aloha.

The plot of the play, its weird and spooky situations, ghost appearances, ghastly murders, storm effects and unexpected finale, together with the splendid cast and acting, are responsible for the universal request for it being repeated at Aloha. As the pleasure of witnessing the play would be greatly marred by advance knowledge of its ending, request is made of those who witnessed the performance at Hazeldale do not acquaint those who expect to see it at Aloha with the astounding and unexpected solution of the mystery, as the surprise at the end constitutes the greatest pleasure in witnessing this most unusual performance.

Admission has been reduced to 15c for adults and 10c for children in order that no one may be deprived of the opportunity of witnessing "Spooky Tavern."

Special scenery, unusual stage settings and startling electric effects are required in the production of the play, and workmen will be engaged next week in transforming the large stage of the Grange Hall into the "Tavern" in which the performance is to be portrayed. Owing to the length of the production, the curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock. Additional seating capacity is being arranged so that the large attendance may be accommodated.

Flax Session to be Held At Hillsboro Monday

Farmers of Washington county will be asked to pledge acreage to grow flax, following an explanation by Will F. Lipman of Portland, at a meeting held in the Hillsboro Chamber of Commerce rooms at 8 p. m. Monday. H. G. Doriot of Tigard, explained to the chamber of commerce directors Thursday that the flax project, which is a cooperative enterprise, will include considerable development in adjacent counties as well as Washington.

All Farmers Are Invited

Proponents of the plan want a sufficient acreage signed up that a retting and scutching plant may be constructed in Hillsboro, which is in the center of what is termed the best flax raising soil in the country. Similar plants are to be constructed in Canby, Aurora, Woodburn and Mt. Angel with the mill in Salem. The local plant would cost about $50,000 and employ 24 persons the year around. Farmers signing up must pay a dollar for membership in the cooperative, which is to own all the plants. Money, it is explained, totaling $5,500,000 will be secured from the government on a selfliquidating basis and retired in 11 years.

Surveys show profits of from $27 to $32 an acre, declared Doriot. Contracts, he said, would provide $25 a ton for the flax. Washington county has 50 per cent more flax raising land than any of its neighbors, Doriot explained. Lipman is very enthusiastic over the possibilities of the flax cooperative and has worked on it for some time.

The plant will occupy seven acres and must be near water.

OREGON COUNTIES GET ALLOTMENTS UNDER FARM ACT

Wheat Benefit Payments Fixed; Cash will be Available Soon

Official allotment to counties of the United States of the number of bushels of wheat on which benefit payments will be made under the wheat adjustment program of the farm act, shows that Washington county has been allotted 350,125 bushels of the 11,450,385 bushels allotted Oregon.

Farmers who agree to reduce their wheat acreage the amount designated by the secretary of agriculture will receive 20 cents per bushel benefit payment this fall and another payment of eight cents per bushel next spring when it is definitely established that he made the acreage reduction that the agreement called for according to recent announcement from the national administrators of the wheat plan. These payments, totaling approximately 28 cents per bushel, will not be paid upon the entire crop but upon 54 per cent of each farmer's average annual production for the base period that is used. In other words, the farmer who accepts the plan and sells his wheat, will get the market price for all his crop plus this benefit payment of probably 28 cents for 54 per cent of his average annual production. If he does not want to sell the wheat but feeds it all on the farm he still receives the payment on his allotment of 54 per cent.

Farmers appointed to the advisory committee last week have tentatively divided the county into seven districts. The districts designated may be altered somewhat prior to the holding of community meetings. Centers or meeting places in each of these districts will probably be about as follows: Sherwood, Aloha, West Union, Roy, Forest Grove, Gaston and Laurel. As soon as the figure for the amount of the reduction is set and some of the necessary forms are available, meetings will be held in each of these communities and those farmers who are interested will have an opportunity of making application and supplying the necessary data for making individual allotments.

The amount of the benefit payment on the allotment is based upon the difference between the average market price of wheat and parity price. Parity price means that price which enables the farmer to buy the same amount of goods with his wheat as he bought in the period of 1910 to 1914. If a large percentage of the wheat growers over the county refused to accept the wheat plan and increased their wheat acreage, and if this increase in acreage resulted in a continued surplus that brought about a relatively low price for wheat, then the benefit payment to the farmer who had accepted the plan would probably be increased as the spread between the average market price and parity would logically be supposed to increase.

Administrators of the wheat act state that the administering of the act is going to be left largely to the farmers themselves. In each county where there is an average annual production of 100,000 or more bushels of wheat a control association will be formed of those farmers desiring to take advantage of the provisions of the act. The members in each district will elect one member to the board of directors of the association. This board will direct the plan within its county and through the allotment committee of the board will make all the allotments for the farmers within the county.
