

Dolls Once Figured as

Objects of Fear, Hate

Dolls, which are today the best-loved toys of little girls, were once objects of fear or hate. They figured in strange rites of black magic and were specially cherished by women. They were used to terrify and cast spells upon rivals, enemies or unfortunate husbands. After certain "magical" ceremonies, it was thought that whatever was then done to the dolls would be felt by the man or woman it resembled. Sometimes the doll was placed before a fire and allowed slowly to melt. As it melted the bewitched person was supposed to die of fear.

According to a distinguished German scholar, during the late Stone Age every family needed these dolls to keep off evils, and manufacturing them became an industry. During excavation work archeologists have found doll-sized dolls made from all sorts of materials, from stone to terra-cotta, tin and bronze. Some were cut out of sheet-iron and look much like modern tin soldiers. In early Asia and Egypt the dolls of important people were filled with quite a population of doll figures. These acted as substitutes for the usual whole-sale human sacrifices. In other places it was the custom for a bride to sacrifice her dolls to the goddess Diana just before the wedding.

Norse Women Wore Bob

In recent years many people have claimed to be the inventor of the shingle, but no one has been able to establish an indisputable title, and it is possible that no one ever will. The Welsh women bobbed their hair 700 years ago, and there are older records even than that of close-cropped feminine fashions. A few years ago archeological excavations near Tilsit, in East Prussia, brought to light remains of the Viking civilization which revealed that many a Norse maiden wore her luxurious golden hair clipped short. Thus more than 1,000 years ago shingling was a fashion among women, while the mode for men was flowing locks.

SAMPSON

Would Save Waterloo Site

Champions of things historical are fighting a proposal to remove the legal restrictions which have prevented building on the site of Waterloo, scene of the great battle and one of the world's greatest battlefields. Its nearness to Brussels has made Waterloo a place of pilgrims to many visitors to Belgium. Many people make the trip because they remember Byron's famous lines on the subject in "Childe Harold." Other and more recent battlefields draw larger numbers of tourists, but Waterloo remains the scene of one of the decisive engagements in world history.
