Tonight and tomorrow night the third Boy Scout Circus will be produced in the International Livestock Exposition arena. You will enjoy it!

On the twenty-sixth of March two of the nation's scout leaders attended the regional conference in Portland. They are James E. West, chief scout executive and A. A. Shuck, director of the division of operations. They were at the council banquet that evening and left an inspiring message.

During the banquet several awards were made: training course certificates, rating streamers, scoutmaster keys, the highest scout masters award and silver beavers—the council's highest award.

A meeting of troop 41 was held Thursday night in the grade school for final circus arrangements.

Conservation and the Scout Law (IV)

6. "A Scout is Kind. He is a friend to animals. He will not kill nor hurt any living creature needlessly, but will strive to save and protect all harmless life."

Helping to protect wild animals from their greatest enemy—fire—is one of conservation's greatest jobs. Anyone can contribute to its success by caution with the use of fire, and by immediate action against an uncontrolled fire.

Befriending injured animals should be the job of everyone. It is a good turn which affects ones, whole life enlarging his appreciation and building his character.

7. "A scout is Obedient. He obeys his parents scoutmaster, patrol leader and all other duly constituted authorities."

A person, especially one interested in conservation, knows and obeys forest regulations. He preaches what he practices. When he goes into a national forest he carries the tools and equipment required, not only for the sake of obeying the law, but for the reason behind the law.

Business Found Abnormal

The American Bankers' association in its Journal, yesterday commented as follows on business and banking conditions:

On the face of things there has been much improvement. Deposits are increasing. No bank in the federal deposit insurance corporation has failed since the inception of the system and it is unlikely that any bank in the system will be allowed to fail.

However, it is evident that with 6000 or so banks more or less supported by government capital on the one hand and over a billion and a third dollars in excess reserves of member banks on the other, with decreasing commercial loans, and investments in government bonds increasing at a tremendous rate, banking is in an abnormal condition.

normal artificial condition. Such also is the situation of business generally. Business during late February and up to late March has been decidedly spotty and banking has been quite as varied. The bright spots are in the south, central west and southwest. The Journal said retail sales in all parts of the country had shown large percentage raises and that most industrial indices continued to gain.

Eleven Banks Liquidating

The federal reserve bank of San Francisco reported 11 banks in the 12th reserve district were placed in liquidation during January and February of this year. These were banks which have been closed a year, not having received licenses since the 1933 banking holiday. The report added: "Several others were consolidated with licensed banks and ten institutions were authorized to resume operations on an unrestricted basis. As a result of these changes, the number of unlicensed banks had been reduced to 40 at the end of February."
