Hi-Way to Health

A SUMMER CHECK-UP

It is a good plan before the summer gets too far along to check up on the diets of your family, especially where there are children. Vacation days mean busy days for homemakers with all the added activities that come with them. Short cuts in the many household duties are in order as long as they do not mean a cutting down of the essential food elements in the child's diet.

Children need the same food in summer that they do in winter, only perhaps in different combinations adapted to warm weather. Vacation days should end with the child in a better physical condition than when they began. Children are tempted by many things, such as too many sweets, soda pop and other things which, if they do no more than to interfere with their normal appetites for the right foods, are damaging enough.

Cool, refreshing milk should have first place in the summer diet. If this becomes an old story, try combining the milk with fruit juices, in season. This combination is delicious.
Any flavoring as vanilla, root beer, chocolate or even a teaspoon of jelly added to a glass of milk will dress it up and make it something pleasing and tempting. A graham cracker or two or a cookie served with a strawberry milk shake for instance makes a desert which promises success to most any meal.

Fruit juices may be used in combination with both eggs and milk to make a more substantial drink.
Quantities of syrup may be prepared at one time and kept on ice to be used as needed. Use 1 to 3 tsp. of fruit syrup with 1 cup of cold milk.
Measure desired amount of syrup, add milk and beat or whip thoroughly.

Honey Iced Chocolate

2 tsp. cocoa
3 tsp. honey
1 cup milk Heat milk to boiling point. Mix cocoa and honey. Remove heated milk from fire, add cocoa and honey mixture and a good pinch of salt.
Stir well. Pour this mixture in iced tea glass filled with cracked ice.
Above amount will provide two servings. Top with whipped cream.

Sun Tan

1 cup of fresh milk
1 tsp. sugar
Dash of nutmeg.
1/2 tsp root beer extract.
Combine the ingredients and mix for one or two minutes. Add the nut meg before serving. This recipe makes one serving.

"MEMORY LANE" CHANGES BROADCAST TIME

"Memory Lane," one of the oldest, continuous programs on the air, the homely philosophies of which have, according to thousands of its fans, become a part of their daily lives, is to change its broadcasting time, according to an announcement made yesterday by its sponsor, General Petroleum Corporation, marketers of Mobilgas and Mobiloil.

On and after July 4 the program will go out over the stations of the National Broadcasting Company on Wednesday nights between 7:30 and 8 p. m., instead of Tuesday nights, as at present. The last Tuesday night broadcast was June 26.

ROBBERS' ROOST

CHAPTER I

One afternoon in the spring of 1877 a solitary horseman rode down the long, ghastly desert slant in the direction of the ford at Green River.

He was a young man in years, but he had the hard face and eagle eye of one matured in experience of that wild country. He bestrode a superb bay horse, dusty and travel-worn and a little lame. The rider was no slight burden, judging from his height and wide shoulders; moreover, the saddle carried a canteen, a rifle and a pack.
At length he rode into a trail and soon came in sight of the wide band of green cottonwood, willow and arrow-weed, and the shining, muddy river. On the far side, up on the level, stood a green patch and a cluster of houses. This was the town of Green River, Utah.

The rider needed to reach that town before dark. His food supply had run out two days ago. But unless there was a boat in which he could row across he would most likely not make it. His horse was too lame to risk in the eddies of that heavy, swirling, sand-laden river.

He rode on down the trail to enter the zone of green. In the thick dust he noted fresh horse tracks.

Under a cottonwood, some distance ahead, the rider espied a saddled horse, head down, cropping the grass.
He proceeded more slowly, his sharp eyes vigilant, and was certain that he saw a man on the river bank.

Presently he rode out into an opening from which he could see a place where a ferry touched. Moored to the opposite bank was the ferryboat.

The rider sat his horse, aware that the man he had observed had stepped behind some willows. Such a move might have been casual. Then the man moved out into plain sight.

"Howdy," he said, laconically.
"Howdy," replied the rider. He became aware of a penetrating scrutiny which no doubt resembled his own.

The rider saw a striking figure of a man, gray with dust, booted and spurred, armed to the teeth. His wide sombbrero shadowed a sharp bold face.
"Aim'n' to cross?" he queried.
"Yes. I see a ferry boat over there." But on the moment the rider was watching his questioner. Then he swept a long leg over the pommel and slid to the ground, without swerving in the slightest from a direct front.
"Lucky for me if I can cross on it.
My horse is all in."

"Noticed that. Fine boss. Wal, I've been hangin' around for an hour, waitin' to go over. Reckon he'll be along soon."

"Town of Green River, isn't it?"
"That's the handle. You're a stranger hereabouts?"

"I am that."
"Where you hail from?"
"I suppose I might as well say Wyoming as any place," returned the rider, casually.

The other man relaxed with a laugh.
"Shore. One place is good as another.
Same as a name. Mine is Hank Hays." He spoke as if he expected it to be recognized, but it brought no reaction from his listener.

"You know this country?" queried the rider, and he too relaxed.

"Tolerable."
"Maybe you can tell me whether I ought to stop or keep on traveling?"

"Haw! Haw! I shore can. But that depends," he said, pushing back his sombrero.
"Depends on what?" the rider asked.
"Wal, on you. Have you got any money?"

"About ten dollars."
"Huh. You can't go in the ranch business with that. Not regular ranch-in'. Lots of cattle between here an' the brakes of the Dirty Devil. Henry mountains, too. Some outfit over there. Air you a cattleman?"

"No," replied the rider, thoughtfully.
"Wal, that's straight talk from a stranger," replied Hays, who evidently took the blunt denial as something significant. "Hullo, another rider. . . .

Shore the desert is full of strangers today."

Back up the trail appeared a short, heavy man astride a horse and leading two pack animals.

"I saw him a while back. And here comes our ferryman. Looks like a boy."

"Huh. You haven't them eyes for nothin'. Wal, we'll get across now."

The rider, after another glance at the approaching man with the horses, took note of the ferry. Boat and third traveler arrived at the bank about the same time.

Hays, after a sharp look at the man with the three horses, led his animal aboard.

"How much is the fare?" queried the newcomer.

"Two bits."

"For man or beast?"

"Well sir, the regular fare is two bits for each man an' horse."

Whereupon the stout man threw the packs off his horses and carried them upon the boat.

"Wall, now, what is this fussy old geezer about?" queried Hays, much interested.

It was soon manifest. He tied the halter of his lead pack horse to the tail of his saddle horse. The second pack animal was similarly attached to the first. Then, bridle in hand, he stepped aboard.

"All right, boy. Go ahead."

"But, sir, ain't you fetchin' your horses on, too?"

"Yes, but I'll swim them over behind the boat. Get a move on, now." The ferryboy pushed off with his pole, and dropping that for the big oar, he worked the boat out into the current, which caught it, and moved it across quite readily into the slack water on that side.

"Didn't like that, did you, boy?" the rider said, as he led the animal ashore.

Hays slapped his mount, driving him off the ferry, while he watched the stout man lead his three horses along the gunwale of the boat, until they could touch bottom. Heaving and splashing they waded out, and their owner followed, carrying one pack.

"Fetch my other pack, boy," he called.

"Johnny, don't do nothin' of the kind," observed Hays.

"I reckon I didn't intend to," said the boy, resentfully.

Puffing hard the stout man carried his second pack ashore.

"You're not very obliging," he said, gruffly, as he felt in his pocket for loose change. The ferryboy came ashore, followed by Hays.

Presently the stout man, grumbling, and evidently annoyed at the necessity of producing a fat pocketbook, took out a one-dollar bill.

The rider, amused and interested from his stand on the bank, saw some-

"Throw Up Your Hands!" Suddenly Yelled Hays.

thing that made him start. Hays whipped out a gun.

"Throw up your hands!" suddenly yelled Hays.

"Wha-at's this? R-robbers!" the stout man gulped.

Hays reached for the man's wallet.
Then he stepped back, but still with gun extended.

"Get out of here now," he ordered.
And apparently he paid no heed to his frightened victim.

"Pretty well heeled, for an old bird," observed the robber, squeezing the fat wallet.

"You'll hear from me, you glib-tongued robber," replied the other, furiously, as he rode away.
