Primaries

The primary election was written into our laws as a measure to reform our party nominating system. Both parties so nominated according to law and the wishes of the majority of each party. Don't be misled by false promises of self starting men who did not enter the legal primary campaign. They have repudiated our "Oregon System." Trust them not.

Red Cross Always Ready to Give

Washington County Red Cross unit should be commended for the rapidity with which they assumed the full responsibility of furnishing miscellaneous supplies to carry on the SERA sewing project in the county. Appropriations of federal money cannot be used to purchase materials, and without the necessary notions to sew, the project would have been void. The generosity of the unit guarantees employment to many women of the county.

Platforms Vanish in Thin Air

President Roosevelt in his speech at the Bonneville dam last Friday stated "the power that we are developing here is power which for all time is going to be controlled by the federal government." Special emphasis was placed on the fact that the distribution and sale of the power would be handled directly from Washington and not by the state. Platforms of several candidates in the November election have been "shot" in so far as the grange power bill is concerned.

Grand Old Document

Beginning with our last issue and continuing for a period of eight weeks, we are publishing "The Constitution of the United States" with amendments as ratified by Congress. Undoubtedly many of our readers have read and studied its contents, but present day problems have brought much criticism on our government leaders as to the constitutionality of many of their acts and orders, and it is for this reason we are publishing this grand old document, that you may again study its contents and their application to these troublesome times.

Hog feeders and bird baths are more or less taken for granted, but for some reason we got a big laugh out of a 40-gallon tank rigged up to supply drinking water for bees.

It is widely believed that the question of the future political trend has a dampening influence on business, and that industry will be quiet until the results of the November election are known.

When Dollfuss died, it looked as if the lid had been taken from the Central European powder keg at last and that the spark was about to be applied. Then the lid was clamped down again. But it sits loosely in its position—the dynamite is still there, and the fuse ready for the match.

COMMENTS

HEADS UP!

It wasn't until I moved to Philadelphia that I became aware of the real significance of the command, "Heads Up!" It is the common injunction of policemen in Bill Vane's town, when handling crowds. When an absent-minded or dejected pedestrian wanders out into the street, some officer is certain to shout at him, "Heads Up."

I think we all need a little of that right now. We need to get our heads up and to realize just where we are, what dangers beset us, and what possibilities there are in the future for us. I am not at all pessimistic. Even though I see a huge politico-bureaucratic machine with decided collectivist leanings bearing down upon us at an alarming rate of speed, I believe we can dodge it as easily as the alert pedestrian steps out of the way of an onrushing automobile.

We have much to put our heads up about, anyway. This nation is not a failure. It has not come to the end of its days, by a long shot. All that we have done in the past is not wrong. To forge ahead individually and collectively is not a major crime against society, the Brain Trust to the contrary notwithstanding.

Here we are, with the greatest machinery, the greatest inventive skill the finest and most honest managerial ability, available for meeting the future. But we have folded our hands and sat down in the shade, or jabbed our hands deep into our empty pockets, hunched our shoulders and are shuffling along with our noses between our toes looking neither to the right or the left.

We need to get our heads up! We need to face a few patent facts. We need to remind ourselves that the whole world is crying to be rebuilt. Houses, buildings, fences, equipment, bridges, railroad rolling stock—everything!—is threadbare and needs to be rebuilt, redesigned. The crack streamlined trains have rendered every bit of rolling stock obsolete; the new steel and concrete houses, factory-built, have likewise set new standards and values for the homes of the land. Look at your clothes! How many of you are wearing frayed clothes you would have been ashamed to have worn six years ago? Look at your shoes! Your hats! Your rugs, draperies and furniture! Has your wife been saying anything about the condition of your bed and table linens lately?

Look at the food that goes on your tables! Has it changed in quantity or quality in these depression years? How many of you are driving an old decrepit automobile because you are a trifle afraid to sport a new car just now?

How many of you have failed to paint your house in the last five or six years? How many have foregone vacations—those of you who can afford such things—because you were afraid, worried about the course of things?

I quite agree that government meddling and interference has been largely responsible for the state of mind we are in. It has multiplied uncertainty, magnified our fears with its idle and bombastic threats. But, sooner or later we are going to ignore these crack-pots and forge on ahead down the old road of individual initiative and achievement. We are beginning to perceive that there is no governmental Santa Claus, no great magical sleight-of-hand which will sustain us for long.

We have to get our heads up. Get out of the Slough of Despond, set our eyes on the great work around us crying to be done. There is no other hope for us, but it is a glorious hope—once we get our "heads up!"—The Scratch Pad, C. C. Sherlock editor.

RADIO AUDIENCE SLUMPS

Thirty per cent of the people having radios listen to them less than they did a year ago, they told Dr. Henry C. Link and his aides during a nationwide survey in 50 cities. To partly offset this were 58 per cent of the folks who listened to their radios at least as much as they did last year and another 12 per cent who were uncertain. There was an increase of only 12 per cent in the number of homes wired for noise.—The Pocketbook.

Efforts on the part of young republicans to revivify the grand old party are commendable, but party success is dependent upon responsiveness to popular acclaim and approval in the carrying out of certain measures. Parties reflect the temper of their own followers and win because they have the approval of the majority. These young republicans ask the people to follow them. What is to be the program of action? Is it to differ from that of their elders? What do they aim to do?—McMinnville News-Reporter.

U. O. Scientists to Dig Out Guano Lake Secrets

Off on an exploration right here in the state of Oregon that may bring forth archeological, anthropological discoveries as important as those made in far-off Asia, Africa or South America, six scientists from the University of Oregon and Stanford University left Eugene last week. They drove from Eugene direct to Lakeview, then took a winding mountain road that after 75 miles of travelling, brought them to Guano Lake ranch, some 40 miles from Lakeview as the crow flies.

The region in which the scientists will carry on their research work is one of the richest fields for this type of investigation on the North American continent, declares Dr. Cressman, leader of the group. On previous hurried trips he has found a wide variety of Indian rock writings and evidences of races who roamed this section many ages ago. It is hoped to discover how far north the "Great Basin" culture of prehistoric races was established.

The country will present many interesting phases for the geologists in the party as well, and much valuable information is expected to be recorded.

Traffic Shows Decrease On Roads Near Portland

There has been a sharp decline on highways tributary to Portland according to recent traffic counts by the state traffic department. At Bertha, W. S. Pacific highway 6,339 vehicles passed compared to 7,363 a year ago.

On Tualatin Valley highway, Route 8, a count just east of Beaverton showed 2,923 counted vehicles as compared with 3,302 last year.

Cramer in New Store

Change of Location Marks Expansion in 33-Year Business

Marking an expansion step in his 33 years in the retail jewelry business, Gus H. Cramer has moved his store from rooms occupied in the Selling building for the past 13 years, to larger quarters at 614 Southwest Broadway.

Mr. Cramer devoted several years to the study of jewelry manufacture and design in Europe and specializes in jewelry designs and precious gems. The new store uses the firm name G. Cramer & Co.

Hop Picking Will Start

Hop picking will begin in a number of Willamette yards next Monday, according to announcements. The early picking will be confined to fuggles. Picking of the heavier hops will start about August 20.

Recent rains were reported to have had a beneficial effect on the hops and a large crop was anticipated by growers.

The AAA has taken out of production this year approximately 43,000,000 acres of crop land, and nature has added greatly to the acreage.

Constitution of the United States

March 4, 1789 and Amendments

THE AMERICAN'S CREED

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore, believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies.

* 5. Powers of Each House—Quorum—Journals—Place of Meetings—Adjournment, During Session. Each house shall be the judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may, in their judgment, require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Neither house, during the session of congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

* 6. Compensation, Privileges and Disabilities of Members. The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No senator or representative shall during the time for which he was elected be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

* 7. Bills for Revenue—Procedure in Passing Bills, Orders and Resolutions. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives; but the senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the president of the United States. If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the senate and house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the president of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the senate and house of representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

* 8. Powers of Congress—The congress shall have power— To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and with the Indian tribes;

To establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

To establish postoffices and post-roads;

To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the supreme court;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas and offenses against the law of nations;

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

To raise and support armies; but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for longer term than two years;

To provide and maintain a navy;

To make rules for government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasion.

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states, respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by congress;

To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular states and the acceptance of congress, become the seat of the government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings; and

To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or office thereof.
