The One Cash Crop

The midwest farmer is indeed fortunate, and his supreme hope lies in the "New Deal" at Washington. "The one "cash crop" unimpaired by the blazing sun, is the relief which comes in regular and bounteous checks from the United States treasury," says a newspaper reporter.

One farmer interviewed, confessed that he had received a check for $3500 for wheat acreage reduction and that he had an additional $1800 yet to come, this despite the fact that his crop this year is a total failure.

The relief returns are sufficient to provide more cash than this district has seen for several years, drouth or no drouth.

One thing plainly demonstrated is that no one is starving, nor are they in danger of starving, so long as federal relief in the form of "Regular and Bounteous Checks" continue to come from Washington.

Eastern gangster murders were brought forcefully home, Monday, when a young university student was shot down in cold blood, by treacherous longshoremen in a raid on a Portland hiring hall, for the simple reason that the loading of boats was not being conducted according to their liking. From communistic controversy into gangsterism. Is there no place for the law abiding person desiring to earn an honest living?

The solution to most problems will be overheard if you listen to the next three men that you observe in conversation.

Heat of the past few days sets a person to wondering how Oregonians would stand up under the continuous heat of the drought areas of the middle states. At least here we get a rain storm every month or so.

In San Francisco jailed Communists go on a hunger strike, refuse to eat. Since most of the group have been living off the county, eating food supplied by the county through the San Francisco welfare department, it is a rather strange distinction they make in refusing to eat food furnished by the county just because it is served in jail.

We see it and to us it appears like principle, and the best sort of principle, at that; the principle of allowing the people to do as they please with their own business.—Abraham Lincoln.

Planning your work is good, but doing it is much better.

"It took an ex-president's daughter 20 minutes to get a divorce and a president's daughter only 10 minutes. Which is one advantage a president's daughter seems to have over an ex-president's daughter. Sometimes with just common folks it takes darned near half an hour."—Don Upjohn in the Salem Capitol Journal.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Franklin Delano Roosevelt may go down in history as either a genius or a bum. With the United States in the throes of the greatest economic struggles in its history, with Roosevelt's so-called program of recovery hardly any more than well started, it is too early to gain any clue as to how future generations may classify him and his administration.—Woodburn Independent.

There is no substitute for newspaper advertising for economical and efficient results. Newspapers go into the homes, not the gutters, and they go into the homes of people who buy as invited guests.

Modernize Your Home Under The National Housing Act

How Loans Will be Made

For several years past, homes all over America have been steadily going down hill. Many property owners have been unable to pay for normal upkeep and repairs. A far greater number have delayed the larger improvements which mean better housing and better living. The lack of cash has been largely removed by the federal government in the National Housing Act, which provides home owners an opportunity of a life time to build, repair, remodel and modernize their homes. Today any property owner in the nation can go to an approved financial institution and ask for credit from $100 to $2,000 for housing improvements. If the credit is approved the financial institution will provide him with the money for modernizing, by the terms of the Modernization Credit Plan under the National Housing Act.

With reference to loans for repairs and improvement the following information is given for prospective borrowers:

"Under the National Housing Act you can go to a responsible local contractor and secure a written estimate of the work you wish done, together with specifications. Let us say it amounts to $500. You take his written estimate to (1) your local bank, (2) building and loan association, or (3) other lending institution and offer your note for $500 to finance it. If you are considered a satisfactory credit risk and the estimate is reasonable the note is accepted and the contractor is authorized to do the work. The lending institution either makes the loan direct to you or pays the contractor on completion of the work, as the Housing Administrator may regulate. You repay the institution which holds your note in equal monthly installments over a period of time as the Administrator may prescribe. These installments include interest at a reasonable rate, but exclude all padded "financial charges."

"The bank or financial institution should make this loan to you now, whereas it perhaps could not properly have done so before the passage of the National Housing Act, because the government under the terms of the act may insure the bank against loss up to 20% of all remodeling loans it makes. This government insurance absolutely safeguards the banks as statistics show that the usual loss percentage for installment loans does not exceed 5%. In view of this ample safety factor it is no wonder that leading bankers have gone on record for 100% cooperation with the government. In other words, subject to certain limitations in the case of state laws, the new government plan makes available credit which for some time past has been largely, if not completely, locked up.

"A financial institution may make you a loan for improvement or repair which you may secure by giving a mortgage or note, depending on what the lending institution may think of you as a credit risk. The maximum single loan for improvement is $2,000. "Repair and remodeling loans may also be secured on structures other than houses, such as garages, stores and office buildings."

The First Security Bank of Beaverton, is among the Oregon banks who are making loans under the new housing act.

Constitution of the United States

March 4, 1789 and Amendments

THE AMERICAN'S CREED

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore, believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies.

In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the president and vice-president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed, or a president shall be elected.

The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them. Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States."

Powers and Duties of the President. The president shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officers in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the senate shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the supreme court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the president alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

The president shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate, by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

3. Further Powers and Duties of the President. He shall from time to time give to the congress information of the state of the union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

4. Removal on Impeachment. The president, vice-president, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for and conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III

1. Judicial Power. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and in such inferior courts as the congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

2. To What Cases the Judicial Power Shall Extend—Original and Appellate Jurisdiction of Supreme Court—Trial and Places of Trial of Crimes. The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity, arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state; between citizens of different states; between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects.

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state shall be party, the supreme court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the congress shall make.

The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed.

3. Treason, Proof and Punishment. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

The congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture except during the life of the person attained.
