cruising radius. Then too it has a sending radio on it, each one has, and they can start their S.O.S. and every body is supposed to stick together till some boat comes along and picks em up. Each life boat has ample provisions. Hard tack and concentrated canned foods, and two large containers of water, and you are supposed to last quite awhile.

Now this launch gathering these up was all news to me, but that's the way it is supposed to work, that is everything going off according to the steamship rules. Of course there is one little hitch in all these plans. It's not a very large hitch, but its of enough importance that it might casually be mentioned, and that is the condition of the sea at the time the enterprise takes place. If the sea is doing enough to wreck a boat, it is liable to be doing enough to keep any immediate assembling from taking place. You can get your life boat over behind a wave from some other one, and its like being over another mountain range, you won't see him for weeks. Every once in awhile you might be sighted on the top of one of these Aquatic Mountain tops, but before lifeboat, launch, or even Amos and Andy by radio can get to you, you have dropped down into the canyon again. That's one thing that makes the sea interesting. Nothing ever happens twice the same way on it. I always thought the old captains had the right idea, go down with the big one instead of getting on a little one and going down with it, or without it. So its a question whether theirs is heroism, bravery, or just good judgment. There is many a time the big one last longer than the little ones.

But it must be a great life. We need more of our young men to take up the sea. He can get his life started about six or eight years ahead of the rest of his companions. He is a man when they are just a freshman. When they are a senior he is an A. B. (able bodied seaman) that beats a diploma, and a fraternity pin. (Able bodied seaman) that means you are a man among men. You haven't had 4 years of varsity football, but you can whip the man that has. A swimming pool and a gymnasium didn't put those shoulders on you. And when you walk up and ask for a job, you know you know your business, and no man out of a book knows if he knows his or not.

Tuberculin Test

rays of chest and further examination made to determine if the involvement is great or if the infection is active, or latent or inactive. This is very important fact to know. It is important to know these facts so that the child may be placed in the very best physical condition and kept so at all times. In case of measles or pneumonia a child known to have this tubercular tendency may be given special care during and following the acute disease. Measles especially, is known to be the great ally of tuberculosis, and after an acute case of measles or rather severe type will cause a latent tuberculosis to flare up and become an active and dangerous type of tuberculosis. Marion, and Clackamas counties have been most active in testing children for tuberculosis. In Clackamas county last year 2400 high school students were tested and 400 had X-rays of chest because of suspicious conditions. This is a very creditable record.

With the support of parents and the P. T. A. and other organizations in Beaverton we may make a creditable record here. The test is perfectly harmless and it is to be hoped that parents will co-operate as they have in the diptheria and smallpox campaigns. Notices will be sent out to parents for permission to make the test.
