BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I see as we prowl. One of the best ocean trips I have had in all my messing around these various oceans, was the one I took away back when I first started out on this trip. It was really in two parts. One leg of it was from Honolulu to Yokohama on the Empress of Canada.

We had a fine bunch on the Canada. We went out long before we all had kinder got acquainted. I think I wrote you one day about the Ambassador from Brazil who was on his way to his new post in Japan. He had been in Copenhagen, those guys have a great life. He had been for four years in Russia before the big war, then in Austria during the war. Then all over the place, he and his wife and two cute children. They move to Japan just about like we would think of moving across the street.

Then of course we had the old mysterious fellow on there about 75 years old, in this case. Nobody knows where he is going or why. The parser said he makes these trips often. And that one time at the Japanese immigration, they asked him what he was doing, he said he was going to buy ammunition for Manchuria. Well on account of Japan at that time annexing Manchuria that did sound so "Hot." But these mysterious ones are on every boat I ever saw. I think the lines have em along to keep the passengers amused and in arguments about who and what they are. This one had whiskers, that made him all the harder to dope out. We had quite a few Britfishers, and of course saw more dress suits than we had seen in years. When that dinner bugle blows an Englishman is just like a fireman. He jumps for his dress shirt, pumps, and high collar, and is ready for the blaze. But they look well in em, and you can't blame em each. Maby if I didnt look like a mule with a lovely horse blanket on, I might be right there within one.

Then there was an old gal on from Kansas City, she had prowled these oceans, said she just didnt have anything else to do, that she only had at home her "Negro maid and a dog" and she would get tired looking at em, and have to leave. She knew everybody on the boat or off it. And everybody in Kansas City. Said she met me at Fred Harveys one night at Kansas City. She

Mrs. C. W. Walls, from P. T. A. headquarters in Portland, gave a talk in the afternoon upon Aims and Ideals of Parent Teacher associations. She urged that parents try to thoroughly understand school situations before making complaint, and realize that schools are trying to build balanced personality as well as to teach skills.

She urged that work in wood and other activities be provided for the small boy who is usually just "shooed."

Mrs. Walls said the whole Parent-Teacher organization is a large group for the study of Child Welfare and Parent Education.

In cooperation with Governor Meier's safety program, the following resolution was adopted:

The Washington County Council of the Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers in quarterly meeting assembled, believing that the safety of our children is our first concern and whereas knowledge of Safety rules is essential to their security therefore

Be it resolved that the observance of safety rules be urged upon our children and the citizens of our community.

The budget was presented by Mrs. W. E. Mays and accepted by the Council.

Mrs. L. C. Nooberry gave a clever drill in parliamentary procedure. Among other actions taken it was solemnly moved and seconded that the club house of the Personal Betterment Society be painted pink. Motion lost.

OSC Beef Cattle Regains Ribbon For Oregon

Winners Entirely Oregon Bred Cattle, Sired from Hereford Stock

The grand championship for carload lots of fat cattle is back in Oregon after many years in neighboring states as the result of the winning of sweepstakes at the Pacific International Livestock exposition by Oregon State college stock raised at the Livestock Branch experiment station at Union.

This carload of Herefords won first in the breed for fat cattle over one year and under two in age, championship for all ages in the breed, and then grand championship over all breeds and ages.

The winners are strictly Oregon breeding and raising and are really a sort of by-product of the experimental work at the station in finding the most economical method of raising baby beef, explains D. E. Richards superintendent of the station.

The calves from which these were raised were dropped in April, 1933, all from the station's regular herd of beef cows, sired by bulls of the Herbert Chandler purebred Hereford herd at Baker. The calves ran with their mothers on the national forest all summer, and then in the fall the 35 young steer calves were put into experimental feeding pens for the winter.

These developed into prime baby beeves by about the middle of May when feeder's day was held at the station and the various feeding methods were explained.

It was then that Superintendent Richards decided to save the most uniform of the lot and show them at the International this fall. Nineteen were saved and fed on hay and grain during the summer, putting them in top condition by show time. From these, 15 were selected to be entered.

The total consumption of feed by this carload of steers from the time they were taken off the range till shown amounted to two tons of hay and one ton of grain, Richards' records show. The steers sold earlier in the year topped the market then at $6.65, while the champion carload, sold at auction, were bought by the States Steamship company at $8.50 to be used on the Oriental lines. The weight average was 1020 pounds when they left Union but only 980 when sold.

Phone Rate Reduction Order Outcome of Long Fight for Lower Rates

Portland, Ore., Oct. 19.—That the 10 per cent rate reduction in Oregon telephone service just ordered by the state utilities commissioner is the outcome of a long fight for lower telephone rates by Senator Joe E. Dunne in the state legislature was revealed here today in a survey of Dunne's legislative record.

From his first session in the state senate, that of 1927, the republican gubernatorial nominee consistently has endeavored to get at the bottom of the telephone controversy nationally as well as locally through various memorials to congress, legislative records show.

In 1927, he was the author of a memorial to congress Senate Joint Memorial No. 4, urging a sweeping investigation of the American Telephone company and its subsidiaries were showing losses. This bill was killed in the senate utilities committee however, and never received a vote.

As a result of this attempt a national action, however, and through increased pressure of public opinion, legislative sentiment gradually crystallized in favor of a state-wide investigation of the telephone companies. This was begun over three years ago, culminating in the voluminous findings, and the order rate cut of the utilities commissioner just released.

While this investigation was in progress, Senator Dunne again renewed his efforts for a nation-wide inquiry into the telephone situation. In the 1933 session, he introduced a memorial to congress, Senate Joint Memorial No. 3, which successfully passed both houses, urging a complete investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and its subsidiaries and requesting that a U. S. Senator from Oregon be named on the investigating committee.
