

Prunes Rich in Vitamins

By Roy E. Miller
MILLER PRODUCTS CO.
Portland, Oregon

The lowly prune will yet come into its own, according to Dr. G. H. Whipple of the University of Rochester, who finds that the food value of prunes is not generally known. Investigation shows that prunes contain 300 units of Vitamin A; 14 units of Vitamin B and 56 units of Vitamin G, per ounce of prunes. Prunes possess a substance that has a definite activation effect on the digestive tract. If more prunes were included in the family diet, there would be less need for pills and drugs. The way to increase the sale of prunes is to sell health—health through the consumption of quality prunes. The way to decrease the sale of prunes is to have a few brown rot prunes in the pack. One brown rot prune will eliminate your desire for prunes for months.
