This law is good; it is sound; it breeds a strong, thrifty, and courageous race. It is one of nature's greatest gifts to the world. Instead of trying to defy this inevitable law, why not honestly teach it to our school children? That's the way to show our real love for people. In so doing we should, of course, make clear that

"Count of Monte Cristo" Reaches Local Screen Million Dollar Film

In preparation for nearly a year before a single scene was filmed, the million dollar production of "The Count of Monte Cristo" which will begin Sunday showing at the Ritz Theatre is hailed as one of the few really big "specials" to come out of Hollywood since the advent of talking pictures, and a forceful answer to the public demand for entertainment of world-wide appeal, for all ages and all tastes.

This lavish filmization of Alexandre Dumas' immortal classic is the most ambitious of the screen achievements to date of Reliance Pictures, Inc., the Harry M. Goetz-Edward Small producing organization, releasing through United Artists, which made "I Cover the Waterfront" and "Palooka," the Jimmie Durante laugh riot.

Search for the ideal personality to play the character of Edmond Dantes, familiar to countless readers of the story in every civilized country, finally resulted in the choice of Robert Donat, handsome young English screen and stage star, whom American audiences saw as the dashing Thomas Culp in "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

Carefully casting the rest of the story, the producers recruited outstanding personalities not alone for the principle roles, but for the countless supporting roles as well. Elissa Landi was the final choice for the role of Mercedes, Dantes' sweetheart; Louis Calhern won the part of de Villefort; Sidney Blackmer was cast as Mondego O. P. Heggie became the Abbe Faria; Irene Hervey was given the role of Valentine; William Farnum was chosen to play Captain Le Claire, and Raymond Walburn was cast as the villain Danglars.

"Have you gone very deeply into the valuation of the dollar?" "On that point," said Cactus Joe, "we're conservative, figuring that a dollar buys one white chip, same as it always did."—Washington Star

Historic Boxes Hold Romance

Revealing a colorful story of changing times and far travels, the above boxes, used for shipping petroleum products, are probably the only ones of their kind in the world. They were built more than 25 years ago, when gasoline was called motor spirits. They are being examined by Neil H. Marsh, manager of the export sales department of General Petroleum Corporation. Note the type of auto on the Pratt's box in use when the cases were made.
