Statehouse Gossip

By ERNEST L. GRAY

A feeling of deep sadness comes over one as he gazes upon the shell of what last week was Oregon's beautiful and historical capitol building. The monetary loss of the great fire—set at $1,500,000 is negligible compared to the sentimental loss and that of the valuable historical features.

Oregon for some time has needed a new and larger capitol building, but none had wished new structure to be obtained in this manner. A new building program is inevitable, but it will be at least two years before a new structure can be erected. A five million dollar project was the figure set in most conversations.

Newspapermen attempting to cover the capitol officials must either get bicycle or roller skates. Offices have been scattered over the business district of the city and it is almost necessary to employ guides to direct the people of the state to the offices they wish to visit.

Some offices are in private homes, the postoffice, the Elk Temple and in office buildings down town. Others have been crowded into the state office building, the supreme court and the agriculture building. And these quarters are being obtained for two years or longer. It will be all of that.

The governor's office, which is considered the official state house, is located on the second floor of the supreme court building, just off the law library. Three desks and private documents were rescued from the executive's quarters during the early part of the fire. The governor has fine quarters already set up.

Governor Martin to date has shunned the idea of calling a special session of the legislature to cope with the emergency. But it appears inevitable. Before any funds can be appropriated from the state for a new building it will require legislative action. Then should it authorize sale of bonds the matter must go before the people.

PWA funds were expected to aid materially in the financing of a new structure. A thirty per cent grant and perhaps a loan of the balance could be secured. Within the next month definite plans will be outlined by the planning board to be used as a basis, and Oregon architects have been invited to compete in drafting designs.

Should a special session be called, perhaps within six weeks, it will be another problem to house it and to get it working facilities. Perhaps

Two Demonstrations Planned for Thursday

Two gopher and mole trapping and poisoning demonstrations will be held in the Tigard and Sherwood communities, Thursday, May 9, by Roy Fugate, Bureau of Biological Survey, and L. E. Francis, assistant county agent.

These rodents are serious pests and are causing considerable damage to gardens, pastures and hay and grain crops. Effective methods for trapping and poisoning these pests have been worked out by the Bureau of Biological Survey. These methods will be demonstrated and should be of considerable interest to farmers.

Those who care to attend these demonstrations should get in touch with the county agent's office, Chas. Van Kleek, Rt. 1, Beaverton, or Richard Joyce, Rt. 3, Sherwood.

'Let's Sell Oregon to Ourselves' Campaign Starts off with Bang

Over two hundred salesmen, representative of the various manufacturing and producing industries of Oregon, responded to the call of the Oregon Manufacturers association for a kick-off meeting to the third statewide campaign of "Let's Sell Oregon To Ourselves."

Will R. Lewis, Oregon Mutual Insurance Company, presided as chairman, introducing as his opening speaker Mac Wilkins, in charge of the advertising campaign.

"When we talk about Oregon Industries, we talk about generalities," said Mac Wilkins. "Oregon does not appreciate those things which are her own. Often I have heard the question, what is the matter with us? What is the matter with Oregon? The answer is that we have everything. Our fields, our streams, and our rugged mountains are filled to abundance with the finest on this earth. It is only a matter of our selling Oregon to ourselves. Here is one place where we can get together. We can sell the state to all of the state. The only thing that is wrong is that we do not appreciate what we have."

"Another trouble is that we do not see the value of advertising. In our last campaign we found that as we expanded in gross business. The first campaign reached 72 papers. The second included over 100 newspapers of the state, and as we increased our budget, just so much did the manufacturer increase his business."

"Our third campaign, May 3 to 11, will be even greater. One hundred and ten newspapers, radio stations, schools, women's clubs, chamber of commerce, and civic clubs are all lined up and ready to start work. Cooperation in this campaign means payrolls to Oregon, and payrolls mean business to every merchant. Everyone hopes to get results. These results can only be obtained by cooperation. The better showing we make in our campaigns, the greater the business for the manufacturer, the producer, the employees—to all! and the greater the opportunity for employment for every citizen."
