Supreme Court Hold Working Conditions Not Under NRA Control

Much comment was occasioned by the Federal Government's recent refusal to contest the constitutionality of the NRA in the Supreme Court when, at the Government's request, the Court dismissed the case against a lumberman who had deliberately refused to obey the code. Critics of the NRA were acrid, friends were silent and worried.

Now both sides have cause to feel better. The government is going to the high court with another NRA case which is as important and as clear cut as that of the dissenting lumberman.

The case involves a company which was indicted on nineteen counts for violating the Live Poultry Code.
These counts run all the way from selling diseased birds to overworking and underpaying workers. The Manhattan Circuit Court of Appeals decision on the case—which prepared the way for a Supreme Court appeal —is interesting. The judges held that, inasmuch as the chickens sold by the company crossed state lines they were within inter-state commerce, and were legally subject to NRA control. But they also held that the working conditions of the company's employees were not an interstate affair, and so could not be regulated by the NRA or any other federal agency. It is obvious that if the Supreme Court sustains this opinion on the NRA will have won a small point and lost a great one—without control over wages and hours, the NRA would be virtually impotent.

Students Cover Capitol Blaze

Corvallis, May 3—When the state capitol burned, Oregon State college students working on the Daily Barometer performed a journalistic coup by sending a special reporter to Salem that night. This budding writer remained there till midnight, got latest details of the holocaust, borrowed cuts of the conflagration from the Oregon Statesman, and returned to the campus. The next morning students had in their own daily paper pictures and stories later and more complete than were in the metropolitan papers reaching this city.

Put Spring in Your Salad

Not so many years ago people in this country were not eating enough raw vegetables, especially green ones, and not enough fruits. In the Spring of the year the molasses and sulphur tonic was resorted to and everyone took this as a matter of course.
Today it is quite the normal thing to have a raw salad at lunch or dinner and in place of spring tonics we put spring into our salads.

Vegetables and fruits are important in the diet because of their mineral and vitamin content. In the raw vegetable and fruit you get certain food values, and flavors too, that are too often lost in cooking. You can build the meal around the salad, especially lunch or supper, and there is nothing more inviting in the spring and summer menu than a generous green salad.

For an attractive salad put one or two green curling leaves of new cabbage on a plate, and fill them with a mixture of chopped cabbage and carrots, alongside a serving of cottage cheese with chopped peanuts mixed in. The cabbage and carrots give you vitamins A, B and C, and you get iron also from the green leaves of the cabbage. The cheese furnishes protein and calcium, and the peanuts furnish protein and fat. In an egg dressing you get still more vitamins and protein and fat; in French dressing, chiefly fat. Bread and butter and a glass of milk will finish out your meal—or you might add a meat sandwich for still further satisfaction or finish off with cookies, tarts, or cup cakes for more starch and fat and sugar, and therefore more calories.

A sort of formula then can be made from this: Raw vegetables or fruits in the salads, meat, eggs, cheese, or nuts in sandwiches or on the salad plate, milk and cakes fill fill out the meal.

Some salad dressing which will help make the salad—

Cottage Cheese Dressing Mix 1 1/2 tsp. salt, a dash of pepper, and 1 tsp. each of sugar and mustard with one egg. Pour into 3 tbsps. of vinegar scalded with 2 tbsps. of water.
Serve on salad.

Boiled Dressing, without Egg Bring to a boil a cup vinegar, diluted to taste, and a tablespoon of butter and sugar, with salt and pepper to season. Cool, add 2 tbsps. thick sour cream.

Fruit Salad Dressing
Cream 2 tbsps. of butter, to this add 7 tbsps. each of salt, and sugar, 1/2 tsp each of mustard and paprika. Put in a double boiler 2 slightly beaten yolks of eggs, add to them very slowly beating constantly, 4 tbsps. of tarrargon vinegar, cook until thick. Remove from fire, add butter and seasoning, beat thoroughly. When perfectly cold and ready to serve fold in 1/2 cup heavy cream whipped.
