Ford Sales Show Increase Over Previous Year

The one million cars Henry Ford predicted his company would sell during 1935 was not just speculation on his part if V-8 sales for the first four months of this year are indicative of the year's total volume.

According to H. H. Wilcox, Seattle Branch manager of the Ford Motor Company, national sales for the first quarter and up to April 10th, had totaled more than 334,000 cars and trucks, establishing a most enthusiastic country-wide acceptance for Ford.

"The Northwest is maintaining the same high record for sales which is so evident in all Ford branches throughout the country," said Wilcox. "During the first four months of this year, Ford sales totaled 9234 in this territory. This figure is 135% greater than for the same period of 1934, and our April volume was the greatest for that month since the peak year of 1929."

The Materially enhanced Willys 77 sedan for 1935

Willys Line For 1935 Has Three Models

For the 1935 season Willys has introduced in its "77" line three new models in a sedan, coupe and panel delivery truck. The new cars have been restyled, particularly at the front. The radiator lines have been raised, thereby eliminating the pronounced curve of previous years. The radiator grille, head lamps and hood louvers also have been given a different treatment.

Overall length of the 1935 line is 155 inches, and the bodies of all-steel are said to be extremely rugged.

ECONOMICAL MOTOR

The engine, of four cylinders, is said to develop 48 horsepower, and to give unusually economical service up to 30 miles on a gallon being claimed. The car is said to be capable of 70 miles an hour. "Floating power" mounting is used.

Among features of the Willys "77" are listed adjustable front seats, bodies insulated against sound and weather, concealed fuel tank, down-draft carburetor, air cleaner and wiper, forced feed lubrication, steel running boards and built-in glove compartment.

EASY HANDLING

As an adjunct to easy handling, the movement of the clutch pedal is transmitted to the clutch proper by a cable connected "pantograph" so that the motor may move without creating unpleasant kick-backs on the foot pedal. The cable flexibility permits the relative movement between the two parts. A similar arrangement is provided for the brake pedal. Automatic spark control and heat control for seasonal adjustment are furnished in the new models. Other items include remote door controls, rear view mirror, dome light (in de luxe sedan) treadle type accelerator and concealed door check straps.
