There is no lobbyist that has so much power over Congress as Mr.
Weather Man. Time after time in the past he has been the dominant factor in tight legislative fights, and this year is no exception. Washington is known for its humidity, which makes it something less than a pleasant summer resort, and July 4 is usually the deadline for a session of Congress. Hot weather was late in arriving this year, but one solid week of blistering days early in July was enough to start the clamor for adjournment.

One of the strange sights of this strange session of Congress has been the picture of the Democrats carrying the bulk of the attack upon what they conceive to be the radical legislation offered by their own party leader, while the Republicans, as a unit, have had little to say. On one day when the Agricultural Act amendments were before the Senate, Tydings of Maryland, King of Utah, and Byrd of Virginia (Democrats all) ripped into the Administration's policies. From them flowed no milk-and-water allegations, but strongly worded denunciations of unconstitutionality and flouting of "the immutable laws of supply and demand."

Meanwhile, the Republicans in the Senate have been something less than militant and many have been content to vote quietly for New Deal measures which they admitted in private they should oppose. As one of the keenest of Washington writers, Carlisle Barger in the Washington Post, put it, "they seem to live in mortal fear that the more aggressive Republicans outside the Senate will do something to embarrass them." There are a few exceptions to this, of course. But very few.

It was Senator McCarran, Nevada Democrat, who rallied against the tarriff agreement negotiated with Russia and introduced a measure to repeal the power given the executive department to bargain away American trade. This came simultaneously with a revelation that duties were to be reduced on cattle through an agreement with Canada. It was a Democrat—Deen of Georgia—who aroused cheers in the House by a ringing demand that Congress ignore the President and adjourn. It was Tydings who staunchly battled the Administration's Wagner Labor Bill, on the ground that it would work harm to Maryland's free workers.

It was this tumult of opposition from Democrats, and reports admitted in Democratic circles that the country was turning away from further experiments that started Postmaster General Farley, Tammany's gift to the Administration, off on his swing across the country to diagnose sentiment.

On the day before the House was to vote on the Tennessee Valley amendments to permit the government to compete further with private enterprise, President Roosevelt sent a batch of nominations for postmasters to the Senate for confirmation.
No chances were being taken of another rebuff from the House such as came on the utilities bill and which precipitated the investigation of "pressure" or "lobbying" by the Government upon Congress.

As hot weather in Washington brings increasing strain on tempers, there has been a growing sensitiveness to the use of the term "must" legislation in describing the President's program. Congress is getting tired of being branded a "rubberstamp" body and the word has been handed down direct from the White House that its legislation is simply "desirable." One national press association quickly banned the use of "must" by its writers, despite the usage of the term up until now by every high official and the further fact that virtually every important piece of legislation enacted at this session has been written by the young lawyers of the executive department rather than by members of Congress.

Chesterfields "go to town"
They Satisfy

—that's just the 1935 way of saying what Chesterfields have been saying for years . . .

Chesterfields do about everything a cigarette ought to do.

Chesterfields have TASTE—yes plenty of it. But not too strong.

And Chesterfields are MILD—but they're not insipid or flat.
