Bob Engleke was promoted to lieutenant-in-chief with Frank Emmong as co-worker, Ed Janssen, George Moshofski, and George Klein are present captains. Chief Engleke asked to have the pins of the mem handed in in exchange for new and better pins.

The public speaking class is now working on oratory and declamation. Those speaking on a theme must write their own oration. Pantomimes, readings, speeches, and monologues are some of the various forms of entertaining being used.

The February free public program Mr. Metzler announced has been postponed indefinitely. It is hoped that it can be held in the near future.

Many employees in your organization will be absent from work some time during the year due to sickness or injury.

Such absences cause losses in efficiency and production that you can't escape.

But you can reduce this loss to a minimum a shave many other employers subscribing to National Hospital Association's "Full Coverage Plan"—a plan which provides sickness and accident preventative measures and medical and surgical treatment—costing the employee but a few cents a day while he works.

This plan has been in use for several years by various concerns, industrial and construction businesses find the "Full Coverage Plan" especially beneficial—for orders or completion of contracts "Wait on no man."

It is especially interesting to note that the construction work on Bonneville Dam was not delayed because of illness during the severe weather of the past few weeks. Delay has been caused entirely by weather conditions not lack of normal health of workers—and it is of interest to note that all employees on this great project are protected by the full coverage plan.

National Hospital Association, 400 Mohawk Building, Portland, Oregon, is at your disposal should you be interested in further investigating this plan.

Newspapers generally paid little attention to the recent resignation of F. G. Awaat as first deputy comptroller of the currency. But it meant much to members of Congress who knew of Awaat's frequent differences with his immediate superior, J. F. T. O'Connor, who has been kept in office by the President despite vigorous criticism from Capitol Hill and other administration officials.

Awaat, with 16 years in the Treasury behind him, was classed as a conservative. He made no critical remarks about treasury and financial policies, but his friends had little doubt as to what he thought of financial policies of the administration which had previously led to the resignation of outstanding financial and budgetary authorities such as Lewis Douglas, who resigned as a Democratic member of Congress at the request of President Roosevelt to
