The Perfect Shave!

At last the men of science, so devoted (according to the advertisements) to the search for adjuncts to feminine beauty, are taking up the problem of men and devoting some research to the development of the "perfect shave."

The Mellon Institute, we are advised, is making a broad study of shaving with an eye to developing the proper steel for razors and, through a shaving clinic, understanding the mechanics of shaving, which, being translated, resolves itself into the "right preparational procedures to ensure satisfactory shaving and to prevent unnecessary damage to razor blades."

The American System!

The American system, some say, is out of date. Well, let's see. It seems to us that the success of any form of government should be determined upon the basis of whether it supplies its citizens with luxuries as well as necessities of life.

Applying that yardstick, here is what we find: In the United States, there is 1 radio to every 6 persons; in Europe, including much-talked-of Russia, there is 1 radio to every 17. In the United States there is 1 mile of railroad to each 500 citizens; in Europe, there is 1 mile to each 2,000. The United States has 1 telephone for every 7 persons; Europe has 1 for every 35. The United States has 1 automobile for every 5 persons; Europe has 1 for every 59. Ten out of each 50 Americans use electric lights; 10 out of every 75 Europeans are electric light customers. In the United States, life insurance averages $864 a person; in Europe it averages $69 a person.

Should we Europeanize?

Credit When Due

In few enterprises is "the human element" so important as in an agricultural cooperative institution.

A chain is no stronger than its link—and a co-op, no matter how well established or managed, is no stronger than its individual members.

Co-ops whose members are indifferent, disinterested, or plain lazy, and who adopt an attitude of "let George do it" are foredoomed to failure. Co-ops whose members are energetic, ambitious and eager to work with and for the organization, can look forward confidently to ultimate success.

Fortunately, the average American farmer seems to be a pretty active sort of person. He has ideas, and the energy to put them into effect. And when he joins a farm cooperative to better his production and distribution methods, he willingly shoulders the responsibility that should be felt by every member. He does his part. And the record of cooperative progress during recent years shows how well that part has been done.

The good agricultural cooperatives are going places. Everyone is benefiting from their progress. And the American farmer deserves the credit.

An excellent sign, reported by Business Week, is a zoom in farm income which during the first four months of the year, exceeded the comparable period of any year since 1930, for a total of more than $2,000,000,000.

There are at least three kinds of people. Those who do their thinking first, those who do their thinking afterward and those who do no thinking at all.

"To know one's self is wisdom; to govern that self is strength."

"For the first time in the history of America we have heard the gospel of class hatred preached from the White House. That is human poison far more deadly than fear."—Herbert Hoover.

"Just as the last campaign was fought on promises that have been broken, so apparently this campaign is to be slipped through by evasion. But the American people have the right to know now while they still have the power to act. . . . What do the New Dealers propose to do with these unstable currencies, unbalanced budgets, debts and taxes?"—Herbert Hoover

Catholic Celebration Set for August 2nd

The executive committee of the State Federation of Catholic societies and the executive officers of the societies committing same held a meeting Sunday afternoon, June 14, in the St. Joseph's Hall, 15 Avenue and Couch Street, for the purpose of fixing a date and place for the celebration of its twenty-first annual Catholic Day.

The meeting was opened by Joseph Woerndle, president of the Federation. Various invitations from local and outlying districts were received and considered, and it was finally voted to hold the next annual Catholic Day on Sunday, August 2, in the St. Patrick's Church, and the adjoining school-grounds at 19th Avenue and N. W. Sawyer Street, Portland.

Already on Saturday August 1, at 7 o'clock p. m., delegates of the various societies will assemble in the St. Patrick's Hall on the ground floor of the church for the election of new officers and for the consideration of general business matters.

Refreshments will be served at ten o'clock by the Croatian-Slavonian Catholic Union, followed by a movie reel of Greenville, Michigan, showing early historical American buildings and institutions of great interest.

High Mass will be celebrated at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, and will be attended by spiritual heads of the Diocese and priests from near and far, as well as by the delegates and officers of the State Federation of Catholic Societies and many visitors from Portland and vicinity.

After High Mass, a delicious dinner will be served in the St. Patrick's hall.

The afternoon's festivities will consist of a general assembly at 2 o'clock on the school-grounds of the parish. A richly diversified musical and vocal program, with addresses by well-known speakers, is being planned for the entertainment of the gathering.

All are invited to attend, and nothing will be left undone to make the occasion as pleasant and interesting as possible.

Responsibility for New Deal Cannot be Glossed

to its constitutionality "however reasonable"? F.D.R.

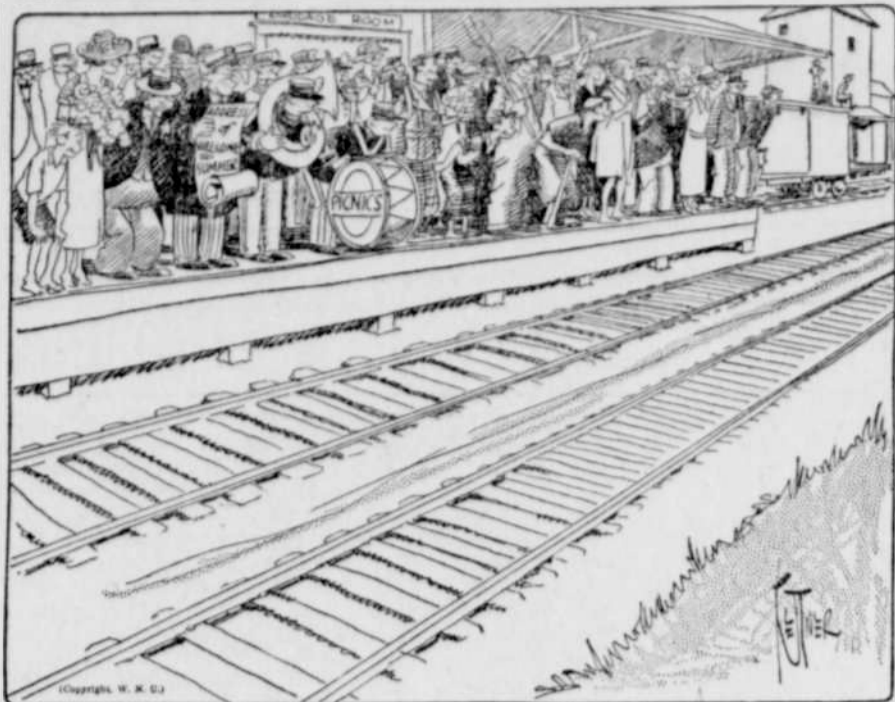

Who was it who eagerly sought the advice of Felix Frankfurter, Rexford C. Tugwell and other apostles of a semi-socialistic state and blithely allowed their ideas to be injected into many measures in Washington? F.D.R.

In other words, the New Deal and Franklin Delano Roosevelt are one and inseparable. What was good in the New Deal should be credited to Mr. Roosevelt. But what is bad it must also be held against him.

To many persons this effort to divert Mr. Roosevelt of all responsibility for the New Deal shows a lack of moral sense such as has rarely been seen in American political life. It is on a par with Mr. Roosevelt's readiness to promise anything to anyone and with the manner in which he completely disregarded his campaign pledges after he was elected.

Hand-in-hand with this subtle undermining of integrity has been an open attack on the moral qualities which made the strength of the American people—on self-reliance, honesty, thrift, industry. These qualities have been ridiculed and their opposites fostered by government action.

Mr. Roosevelt, as already indicated, cannot be blamed for seeking re-election. He would not be the good politician that he is if he did not try to use every trick that may get him votes. But this is no reason why his opponents should let him "get away with" the brazen contention that he is better than the New Deal, and that even if you dislike the New Deal you should continue to support him. If you re-elect him you will have four years more of the New Deal—and there is every reason to expect that its worst features will be intensified.

The choice is not between Roosevelt and the New Deal but between the New Deal and the Republican ticket. There is no alternative.

In 1896 there were only four automobiles in the United States using gasoline for fuel. In 1936, there are twenty-five million motor vehicles in this country, three million of which are registered in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, and Arizona, according to C. J. Barnes local manager of General Petroleum corporation, the $170,000,000 paid every year in federal gasoline taxes would buy enough fuel to fill the tank of every auto three times, and run it 500 miles.
