BABSON SAYS

WHEAT AND COPPER

Heading the list of these fundamental factors is the Law of Supply and Demand. After centuries of trying to find a substitute, this old natural law still reigns supreme. We can have no more vivid illustration of the futility of trying to get around it than the story of our cereal markets since 1934. Two years ago our carry-over of wheat was practically equal to one whole year's supply. Since then three short crops have virtually wiped out this surplus. Prices have trebled and are still headed higher. The same situation is true in the case of many other farm products such as corn, oats, and cotton and allied commodities which move in sympathy with them. Radically reduced supplies of agricultural products killed the AAA farm program.

At the same time, stronger demand has done away with the necessity for certain industrial commodity agreements. During the depression, world copper producers tried desperately to control the output and price of their commodity. However, as the bottom fell out of business during 1931 and 1932, prices melted below the cost of production. With the sharp recovery since 1933—69 per cent according to the Babsonchart—an increased demand has taken care of bothersome copper surpluses and trebled quotations.
The 1936 political campaign can not out-mode such an age-old economic force as the Law of Supply and Demand any more than the AAA or copper proration could.

FEARS RISING LIVING COSTS

While the election will probably unsettle conditions from time to time, I am sure it can not now stop the insurmountable tide of business. Readers know that I am bullish on the long-term outlook for business whoever is elected in November. In every recovery period commodity prices have advanced sympathetically although they have moved faster in some cycles than in others.
