Mrs. Emma Johnson of Portland and daughter Mrs. Jack Knight of Grants Pass, and Mrs. Seater of Portland, were visiting Mrs. J. S. Felsher Saturday.

Howard Hughson is seriously ill at his home.

Tuberculosis Drive History Reviewed

Few of us buy our Tuberculosis Xmas seals know the story behind the seal. It is an interesting story and bears repeating.

In a small village in Denmark in 1904, a postal official Einar Holboedll, conceived the idea of the first Christmas seal. Noticing all the cheery greetings passing between friends and relatives, he wondered why these letters couldn't carry a message of health that would bring funds to fight disease.

The king and queen of Denmark gave patronae to Einar Holboell's idea, and the first seal became a reality that year. Other Scandinavian countries soon took up the idea and in 1907 an American woman, Emily P. Bissell, living in Wilmington, Delaware, decided to try the plan in the United States.

The first seal sale was launched in 1907. It was so successful that she persuaded the American Red Cross to back the next seal sale. To everyone's surprise the sale in 1908 brought in $135,000.

In 1910 the American Red Cross took the National Tuberculosis Association into partnership for the conduct of the Christmas seal. This partnership existed for ten years. Then the Red Cross wanted to devote all of its time to its own membership campaign, so the Tuberculosis Association has been the sole proprietor of the Xmas seal since 1920. Since that time the seals have regularly borne only the double-barred cross emblem of the international fight against Tuberculosis.

As Christmas approaches, and the annual sale of Christmas seals begins, won't you join in with the millions of other men and women throughout the country who are helping to fight Tuberculosis. This year you will buy your seals through the mail only. No sale will be conducted in the schools. Every seal you buy is a modern bullet in this modern fight against Tuberculosis.

Assault Victim Sues for $5,074

Seeking $5000 general damages and $74 special damages, Napoleon Royier, middle aged war veteran with a crippled arm, of Tualatin, filed suit this week against William Barber, Murl Gray Elmer Mitchell, James Ferguson and Harry Mitchell.

Royier in his complaint recites that he was taken forcibly from under an auto in a Tualatin garage and beaten.

His request for $74 additional damages alleges that $24 was missing from his person after the attack and the other $50 represents cost of medical aid.

William Barber, 34, on Novvember 10 was sentenced to 3 months in the county jail and Murl Gray drew 4 months on their plea of guilty to a charge of assault and battery upon Royier; they previously had been indicted by the grand jury while the other defendants drew not true bills.

Million Population Reported In State

Portland, Oregon, Nov. 27—"No longer need Oregonians class their state in the under a million bracket for population" said Walter W. R. May, manager of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, in commenting on the population figures recently released by the Census Bureau of the Department of commerce. According to these statistics there are now approximately 1,017,000 persons residing in Oregon. This means an increase of slightly over six per cent in the six year period between 1930, when the last offical census was taken, and 1936 when this latest census estimate was made.

The greatest period of growth for Oregon was between 1900 and 1910 when the population increased 62.7 per cent. The decade prior to that time showed a 30.2 per cent growth and the succeeding decade 16.4 per cent.

While there was a slackening in the rate of growth during the last six years this situation is not peculiar to Oregon but is general over the west coast.

Earl Fisher Candidate for Mayor Beaverton

The Town Caucus was held at Beaverton High School Friday night. The meeting was called to order by Mayor Wilson. W. E. McCloskey was elected chairman and Homer Wilson chosen secretary.

F. W. Bishop was nominated as candidate for Mayor, Councilmen for two years: Dewey Drorbaugh, Guy Carr and L. H. Humburg; Councilman for one year: Robert Johnston. Recorder-Treasurer, Homer Wilson. Hold over Councilmen Harry Barnes and Albert Rossi.

Mr. Bishop was not present at the caucus, since his brother Thomas recent death, he looks after his hardware business alone, and will be unable to accept the nomination as mayor. In the meantime a number of citizens have persuaded Earl E. Fisher to be a candidate for mayor.

Mr. Fisher states that if elected he will work with the Council for the best interests of Beaverton .

DEATH OF WOMAN SHOWS SHE LIVED AS MAN 40 YEARS

Masqueraded So She Could Help Men Whom She Found in Trouble.

San Francisco.—A kindly little individual known in San Francisco for forty years as Jack B. Garland, sixty-seven, social worker, former newspaper man and writer, was revealed in death as a woman.

"Jack" Garland collapsed in a street one night and died in a hospital next morning of peritonitis. Dr. Rolla B. Hess, who performed an autopsy, said "Jack" was a woman.

Her real name was Elvira Virginia Mugarrieta.

A friend, Mrs. Mary Haines, reported "Jack" Garland turned to masquerading as a man years ago to facilitate her desire to help the needy. Associates said her real name was Beatrice Garland. Mrs. Haines said:

"Many years ago she witnessed a heartless scene in the office of a private charity organization that moved her to go into the streets at night to help the distressed.

"She found that she was handicapped by her sex. She put on men's clothes to make her work more effective."

Worked in Philippines.

Among "Jack" Garland's effects were papers indicating she had worked with the Red Cross during the Philippine insurrection and had authority to pass through military lines.

Mrs. George Shadburn, sixty-nine-year-old social service worker and writer, told how "Jack," who was her sister, had worn men's clothing since she stowed away aboard a transport bound for the Philippine Islands during the insurrection in 1898. She said:

"It's always been a bone of contention — this masquerade of Elvira's. I knew something, some day, would happen.

"But suppose you had noble ideals, but the fact you wore skirts instead of trousers was a handicap?

Elvira Puts On Pants.

"Elvira did the only thing she could. She put on pants. Some how she stowed away and got to the Philippines in 1898 as a free-lance newspaper correspondent. She also helped as a Red Cross aid — did grand work. Then she came home.

"She continued to write. Finding that a woman could not prowl around alone at night, she preferred to be a man."

"Jack's" father was a major in the Mexican army who founded the first Mexican consulate in San Francisco after the Mexican war. The mother was Miss Elisa Alice Garland, daughter of a Louisiana supreme court justice.

Legislative Act Effects Teacher After January 1

The amount of training required for a certificate to teach in the elementary schools of Oregon is due for an advance on January 1, 1937, in line with legislation enacted at the 1935 session of the legislature, according to a statement issued by State Superintendent C. A. Howard. The statement follows:

Graduates of standard two-year courses at Oregon normals who wish to secure certificates on the basis of such graduation, but who have not yet done so, will need to make application to the State Department of Education before January 1, 1937. On that date the amount of training required for an Oregon elementary certificate will be advanced to include a full term of twelve weeks of professional training in addition to the completion of a standard two-year normal course. Persons who apply for elementary certificates after January 1, 1937, will be required by law to meet the advanced qualifications.

Under the regulations of the State Department of Education, the holder of a one-year certificate based on standard normal school graduation who fails to teach long enough during the life of such certificate to be eligible for a five-year paper can secure another one-year certificate at such time as he may wish to apply for it.

Business Best Since 1929

Babson Discusses Stocks, Unemployment, Wages

Babson Park, Mass., Nov. 27—Business news seldom crashes the front pages for weeks at a time. The post-election boom, however, is so spectacular that it is making headlines daily. The nation is agog amazed, by a tidal wave of dividend inncreases, wage boosts and year-end bonuses. Business has moved ahead to a new recovery peak. The sharp swing upward is bringing in a flood of questions about the outlook for business, stocks, unemployment, and wages. Those people who are accustomed to good things coming the hard way are wondering if this sudden burst of optimism is sound and basic.

Basic Trend Sound

Fundamentally, this post-election boom is justified from a long-pull standpoint. Business hit its low early in 1933 and for nearly four years we have been struggling upward. In the interim, business has been sub-normal but our population has been growing. People have had to be fed, clothed, and transported. During that dreary period we neither produced nor bought enough goods to meet our needs. For a long time consumption ran ahead of production. Demand in the meanwhile has been slowly improving. Gradually people have come to realize that the nation is on the upgrade.

During the past three months there has been a great improvement in public sentiment. The average American today is convinced that we are swinging into a real boom. Statistics appear to back up this opinion. Business has reached the X-Y line on my Babsonchart on the way into a prosperity period for the first time in fourteen years. The tide is with us. Not only are we being aided by the normal growth of American business (which averages nearly two per cent per year- but we also have the added impetus of a big potential demand built up by five years of sub-normal satisfaction. The coming era of good times may even at some time, though temporoarily, exceed the 1929 peak.

Stocks Not Short Sale

This post-election boom also has investors worried. The current fever of optimism, of course, has ignited Wall Street. Stocks are today 30 per cent higher than last year. Prices have had a sharp spurt since the election. People who bought months ago are wondering if they they should now take profits; others who have been timidly holding their cash liquid are wondering if they have missed the boat. These investors who are in doubt about the long-swim have lost their perspective. I can not recall any recovery period when the market reached its peak with business only at the Normal Line. We are not yet in an era of business over-expension and the trend is still basically favorable.

Furthermore ,those who do want to accept their profits hesitate to do so because of the reinvestment problem. Money rates are still ridiculously low. Bonds yielding 3 to 3¼ per cent interest may turn out to be just as dangerous as may stocks selling at a higherprice-earnings ratio. Good mortgage loans are hard to get. Bank deposits return little or no yield. Meanwhile the cost of living is steadily rising . Hence, I see no reason why investors would now want to unload their stocks of companies whose earnings are progressing satisfactorily. Easy money rates are a strong market factor; so long as they prevail, I am not worried about stocks being so high as to offer a good short sale yet.

Do Not be Fooled by "Unemployment" Figures

Another question which is bothering more and more people in view of sharply improving business is the unemployment and relief problem. The Administration is planning to take a complete and accurate census of the "unemployed." All through the depression business observers have been troubled by the lack of reliable jobless figures. Various estimates are made from time to time but these are simply guesses. Currently they range around eight million. Even though the forthcoming census may support this estimate, I will not be satisfied. In taking this census, I feel that labor experts are overlooking a very fundamental point. While a census should be made, it should be of the employed as well as the unemployed.

The Department of Labor has fairly accurate figures on the number of employed at various periods in the past. If we compare these totals with our population figures we will get a fair per-capita-employment average. If we take an unemployment census however, there will be no past figures for competitive purposes. The fact that eight million are jobless today does not necessarily mean that our percentage of unemployed is greater than it was twenty years ago. Hence, while it is important that we should take a periodic census of the unemployed as well as of the employed nevertheless the Administration should not base its relief and other policies entirely on the jobless figures.

Wage Issue Up Again

Furthermore, the answer as to who constitutes a "jobless worker" has changed in recent years. Today millions of young people and old folks would want to be tallied as unemployed by the census taker. Twenty years ago these people would have been considered simply "at home". If for no other reason than this, I believe that
