

New County Health Unit Organization Work well Underway

CLARA ENGBRETTSEN, R. N. County Nurse
Organization of work in the new Washington County Health Unit began January 1, 1937, according to Dr. D. C. McDonald, the new County Health Officer.

The program carried out by the new unit will be established according to the community needs. The activities extending to almost every development in the Public Health field in cooperation with the local doctors and dentists.

The plan of work in any health unit is: (1) To educate the public in healthful living; (2) To guard against epidemics by preventing, so far as possible, the occurrence of disease; (3) To encourage the public to take advantage of preventative medicine and have periodical examinations and to rid the environment in which we live of conditions which are likely to cause disease especially guarding milk, water and food.

To educate the public in healthful living is really the first duty of any health department and if done properly embraces the other duties. Under the complete health unit systems (A full time health officer, two nurses or more, and at least one clerk) the program is based on a plan outlined by the United States Public Health Service. It provides for health education in prenatal, maternity, infant and preschool care, tuberculosis supervision, communicable disease control and schools.

The scope of school work has been defined as: 1. Health training and instruction to be given to all children. 2. Physical training activities as recreation and correction. 3. Preparation of healthful food. 4. Preparation of teachers for health training and instruction. 5. The hygienic arrangement and administration of the school program. 6. The hygiene of the school plant and mental hygiene. The health unit will work very closely with all organized groups promoting health such as the Health Association, the P. T. A. and American Red Cross. Complete health service includes help in improving the health of every person young or old. The new public health program includes a wide range of activity for the prevention and control of communicable disease to almost any problem relating to public health.

Restaurant Owner Robbed of $30

A robber, whose face was hidden by a white handkerchief, held up and robbed Lillian Parsons of $30 at her beer parlor and restaurant east of Forest Grove early Monday morning. The man pointed a gun at her and took $12 in silver from the cash drawer, and then ordered "Dig up the bills" and was awarded with more money from a hiding place and from the woman's person, sheriff J. W. Connell learned.

Four patrons were in the beer parlor at the time and told officers that the intruder apparently escaped in the car of an accomplice waiting outside. The intruder was described as young of light complexion, wearing a tan coat and blue overalls. His mask was a handkerchief with eye holes cut out.

BABSON SAYS

his bank, the young depositor should make his own investigation and his own decision. Investment habits—like living habits—are generally formed in youth. "Investigate before you invest" is a mighty good habit to learn early. The four big factors to examine in choosing the bank are: The bank's published statement of condition. Character of assets. Management. Confidence of community.

Step Number Three should be a reasonable amount of simple life insurance. The basic function of life insurance is protection against premature death. Hence, life insurance affords some element of speculation,—scientific speculation based upon mortality statistics. If the insured dies before his statistical expiration, his estate receives a higher return than it could get in most other ways with equal security. There is danger, however, in over-concentrating on insurance just as there is on any other part of the program. Avoid taking too much. Also remember that the cheapest insurance is a straight life-insurance policy unadorned by any frills!

The Double-Barrelled Investment

As his income increases, the young man then makes the most pleasant investment of his life—his first home. This is Step Number Four. Real estate, like other investments, has its smiles and its tears. It is the most stable form of investment and at the same time one of the least liquid. It may take only a minute to buy but it may take years to sell. The home has many intangible assets—such as comfort and peace of mind—which often outweigh the economic arguments. It is usually about as cheap to rent as to own. The important point in ownership as an investment, however, is the increasing value of the property. The key to that is the location of the lot and a good sensible design which adds to the saleability of the house.

Step Number Five is the consideration of bonds and conservative stocks. When wisely chosen, they are the premier form of security investment. Remember, however, that there are all kinds of bonds and stocks—ranging from good to bad. In analyzing a bond issue, like any other piece of merchandise, the young investor must follow elementary fundamentals of confining himself to types of business he understands so that he may be able to judge true values. Then he should be able to see through a corporation report. Finally, he should consider the nature and management of the business security behind issue, yield and marketability, special points such as call price, and possibility of inflation. Just as in the case of selecting your bank, seek the opinion of others, but check your facts before buying.

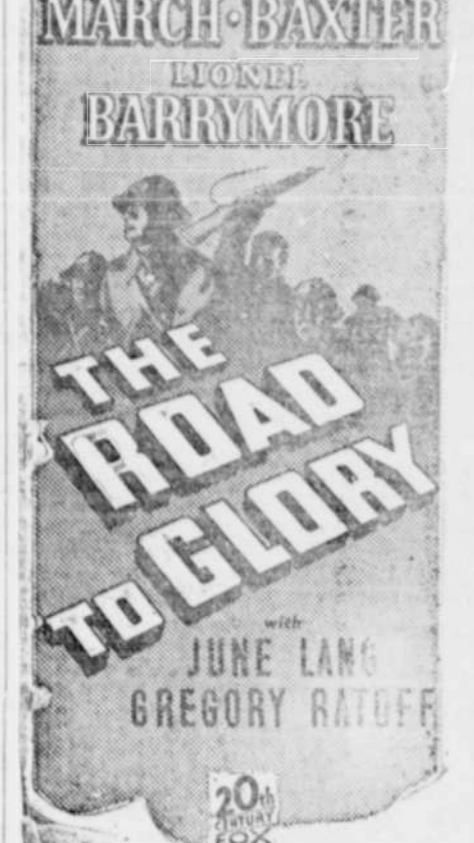

Speculative Stocks Last Step
After the young investor has taken these five steps and after his salary reaches a certain level, then—and not until then—is he ready to place money in speculative stocks. Because stocks are certificates of ownership in a business, the man who buys them must realize that he is assuming all the chances of gain or grief inherent in any business. He is competing with the specialists in the art. Billions are made in paper profits and other billions are actually lost. At certain periods stocks become very popular. There is a scramble to buy and prices are bid up to fictitious levels. At other times, there is an equally silly stampede to unload. Therefore, property timing is perhaps the most important of all stock investment "musts".

This, then, is a brief outline of the six major steps in building your financial future. There is one final and focal point, however—the plan. For thirty years I have preached that the Law of Action and Reaction applies in economics just as it does in physics and other sciences. Interest rates, real estate values, bond yields, and stock prices move in cycles. From my years of study of this question, I find that the vast majority of people buy when they should sell, and sell when they should buy! The reason for this is the lack of co-ordinated plan and the character and will-power to hew to the chalk-mark. Hence, my advice is to lay out today a definite program and stick to it. It is a much

F. Marion Stokes, Architect

Mr. Stokes Again Demonstrates to Oregon the Scope of his Architectural Ability

Just when architecture grew out of man's humble attempts at building is impossible to say. Probably the love of beauty and the love of architecture developed together, for architecture means the banding together of utility and beauty.

F. Marion Stokes, located in Portland, is one of the leading architects of the Pacific Northwest. He has designed many excellent buildings in Oregon including work done both for the State and Federal Government. Among some examples of his work in the Tualatin Valley are the Gymnasium and Auditorium for Tigard Union High School, Hillsboro Union High School, Raleigh Station Grade School, Newberg Central Grade School and Vernonia Grade School.

Mr. Stokes received his early training and Bachelor of Science degree from Oregon State College. Mr. Stokes has a large background in the building game. His father, William R. Stokes, senior member of the firm Stokes-Zeller Company, was connected with the contracting field for 40 years in Oregon. The work of F. M. Stokes as an architect is held in highest regard in relation to every phase of building endeavor. Often it is due to his creative ability and extensive artistic skill that the realization of a beautiful and useful structure is accomplished. Before a spadeful of earth is turned or a brick laid, every detail of the structure has been planned by the architect, who in his sketches gives the people the idea of the composite effect embodied in the new building as well as its features of construction.

Mr. Stokes is a courteous and accommodating gentleman who can be reached very conveniently. The general satisfaction expressed by his many clients and the great demand for his services constitutes a well merited tribute to his efficiency and conscientious methods.

We wish to compliment him upon the very nice piece of work that was done in the design and construction of the new Williams and Company $50,000 factory and to direct our readers attention to call on Mr. Stokes when in need of his most capable services.

Look at a Potato

In looking at a potato have you ever stopped to realize how many different delicacies can be concocted from this vegetable. There are hundreds of ways to prepare a potato for food but the only way in which potatoes are sold on the market all ready prepared, is the potato chip.

Frank E. Williams, President of Williams and Company, manufacturers of the Famous Saratoga Chips, has given to the Northwest a potato chip whose quality and tastiness is the acme of perfection. Last year Williams and Company used over 900,000 pounds of Oregon potatoes in the manufacture of the Saratoga Chip.

Frank E. Williams is a man who is well known in Portland and vicinity, in fact, as well known as the Saratoga Chips he manufactures. In completing the new $50,000 factory in Portland, he has shown the faith he feels in Portland and the Pacific Northwest. He knew that in manufacturing the Saratoga Chip he was giving to Oregon a food product that would be appreciated. The volume of sales speaks for itself. So when you sit down at your next meal, try a package of Williams and Company's Saratoga Chips.

You can obtain Saratoga Chips from your grocer, have them included in your next meal.
