Oregon's Auto Deaths

A Series of Weekly Articles on the Problem of Highway Safety By EARL SNELL, Secy. of State

Hardly a day goes by but that some resident of this state loses his motor vehicle operator's license as the result of a conviction in a court of another state. Most of these cases come from Washington and California, but there have been instances where the cases originated in courts of far eastern states.

The Oregon law provides that in all cases where the holder of an Oregon operator's license is found guilty in the court of another state of an offense which if committed in Oregon would call for mandatory revocation of his license, the penalty shall be enforced the same as if the conviction had been in an Oregon court. The resultant loss of driving privileges has been a complete surprise to many of our citizens who were under the impression that the fine or other penalty assessed in court and paid ended the matter.

Also, under the Oregon operator's law, forfeiture of bail is equivalent to conviction. There have been a number of cases where Oregon residents were arrested in southern Washington towns on drunken driving charges, forfeited substantial bail (running as high as $250) and then discovered that the penalty under the law
