Many and Glorious Stars in Florence's Firmament

Attractions in Florence, Italy, are as wide as the heavens, and in its heaven shine the stars which the world does not forget, observes a correspondent in the Boston Globe.

Here restored almost beyond recognition at 2 Via Dante Alighieri is the house where its greatest poet was born. Here also were cradled Cimabue, Giotto, the Lippis, Del Sarto, Cherubini, the composer, the sculptors Ghiberti and Donnatelli.

In the Borgo Ognissanti, Amerigo Vespucci was born; at 16 Via Del Guicciardini, Machiavelli, the author of "The Prince," was born. Not far away is the birthplace of Florence Nightingale.

In the Piazza San Lorenzo, Browning bought for 35 cents the old parchment covered book which he made the basis of his "Ring and the Book." In a wood skirting the Arno outside, Shelley wrote his "Ode to the West Wind"; the city is also the scene of George Eliot's "Romola," of Browning's "Christmas Eve and Easter Day," of A. M. Forster's "Fast of St. Magdalen," and scores of other books. At the Casa Guidi, Elizabeth Barrett Browning wrote in 1857 her "Aurora Leigh." Here died Walter Savage Landor and Theodore Parker.

Here are the tombs of Michaelangelo, Galileo, Rossini and Alfieri.
The firmament of Florence is one of the most famous in the world.

Busiest Termites Blind

and Avoid the Daylight

The species of termites common in this country live in old logs; dead or decaying wood; in sills of buildings, or in the ground under stones.
They select for their food moist wood or books or papers stored in moist places. As the workers are blind and avoid the light, and as the bodies of termites are soft and not able to withstand drying, the injuries from these pests are hidden and often unknown until suddenly a building collapses or a piece of furniture falls to pieces or the inside of a book is found eaten away. No evidence of the presence of the culprits inside is obtained from an outside examination, states a writer in the Detroit News. A piece of timber that appears perfect from the outside may be nothing but a shell.
An infested timber is easily detected by pounding with a hammer, giving a hollow or shell-like sound.

The termites cannot be detected by listening to their boring. They are fought with poison gas, with ar-senical smelter dust blown into their burrows, etc.; timbers are treated with creosote, while metal and creosote barriers between the foundation and woodwork to prevent contact between the termites and the soil or other source of moisture are effective.

San Marino Claims to Be

World's Oldest Republic

The little republic of San Marino, in central Italy, claims the distinction of being the oldest republic in the world, holding itself to be also the oldest state in Europe, dating back to the Fourth century.

The oldest consequential republic, however, is certainly Switzerland, asserts a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

On August 1, 1291, the men of Uri, Schwyz and Lower Unterwalden entered into a defensive league. In 1353 the league included eight can-tons, and in 1513 thirteen. Various allied or subject territories were acquired either by single cantons or by groups of them, and in 1648 the league became formally independent of the Holy Roman Empire.

No addition was made to the number of cantons until 1798, in which year, under French influence, the Helvetic republic was organized.
This did not satisfy the Swiss, and in 1803 Napoleon gave them a new constitution and increased the number of cantons to nineteen.

The perpetual neutrality and inviolability of Switzerland was guaranteed in 1815 by Austria, Great Britain, Portugal, Prussia and Russia, and three new cantons were added.
