At the close of the third month of 1938, Washington county held fourth place among Oregon's 10 Group I counties on the basis of improvement over 1937 in traffic accidents, injuries and deaths. Secretary of State Snell reported this week.

Last month this county ranked second. Counties in Group I placed in the following order for their improvement during the first three months: Multnomah, Clackamas, Columbia, Washington, Portland, Clatsop, Marion, Benton, Polk, Yamhill.

Lincoln county placed first among the seven Group II counties and Deschutes among the eight Group III counties.

During the first three months of this year there were 167 accidents, 42 injuries, and 1 death reported from this county. Last year there were 160 accidents, 58 injuries and 2 deaths.

Canada Has "Townships"; Divided in Early Times

For a generation following the American Revolution which ended in 1783, the Canadian-United States international boundary line was only vaguely known, and some considerable settlements were made by people who may have thought they were still in the United States. Most of the settlers came from the New England states and established themselves in what are known as the Eastern Townships of Quebec, relates a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

This territory was divided into townships in the early years of the British regime in Canada. This mode of division distinguished the section from the parishes of the lowlands near the St. Lawrence that were established during the period of French control. The "townships" comprise 13 counties and occupy some 8,000 square miles of rolling plain. On the south and east they extend to the international border and are adjacent to the states of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The location of this storied area of French-Canada makes it of easy access to the motorist who will find that nature and man have cooperated in making it one of the finest holiday centers of the continent.

Much of U. S. Part of Mexico

Nearly a third of the territory of the continental United States was once a part of Mexico. It was acquired by the United States in three annexations. The first was when Texas, which had rebelled from Mexico and set up a separate government, was annexed to this country in 1845. The question of the Texas boundary led to the Mexican war, at the conclusion of which our southern neighbor ceded everything north of the Rio Grande and Gila rivers. In 1853 this country settled a number of questions of boundary, property and damages by purchasing an additional strip of southwestern land from Mexico—the Gadsden purchase. Included in these three cessions were all of the states of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, and California; more than half of Colorado, and parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Wyoming.

Judge Uriah Milton Rose Arkansas' First Citizen

When the state of Arkansas moved to make its first gift to the capitol's hall of fame, it chose a native of Kentucky for that honor, writes Leslie Hartley in the Washington Star. Uriah Milton Rose as a young man, however, followed the trend of his day to "go West" and moved to Arkansas. There he became known as the state's "first citizen."

Though born in 1834 of a wealthy family, Rose was orphaned when he was fourteen years of age and, the family fortune having been spent, went to work as a clerk in a store. At night he studied law and later became a charter member of the American Bar association and its president in 1901.

Arkansas also called Rose the "Friend of Presidents." When he was chosen to entertain President Theodore Roosevelt during the latter's visit to Arkansas a strong friendship between the two developed. Roosevelt often remarked that Judge Rose, who was widely traveled, had the "wisdom of Socrates" and in 1907 appointed him as one of the delegates to the Second Palace Tribunal at The Hague.

Judge Rose's last contribution to his state was made after his death in 1913, when his library of 8,000 rare volumes was given to the public library in Little Rock.
