Diesel Principal Old
Hundreds of years ago the savages in Burma and Samoa used the basic principle of the Diesel or compression-ignition engine. They used it in their fire lighters, which were like nothing so much as a bicycle pump with the hose crimped so that the air can't get out, says Power.
They put a little dried moss or other combustible on the end of the plunger, entered the plunger in the barrel and snapped it down with a sudden, hard blow. The resulting air compression inside the barrel raised the temperature of the air sufficiently to ignite the combustible, so when the plunger was withdrawn it was glowing and had only to be fanned into flame.
