A RISING TIDE

With primary politics being the top-rung topic in Washington these days, little is being heard now about amendment of the National Labor Relations Act. That issue will become more and more of a headline between now and next Congress, however, first because a special government commission is now studying the British labor law, and, secondly, because sentiment for amendment for our own labor act appears to be growing.

Latest pleas for an amendment—and a most significant plea—has come from the very organization which claims credit for originating the National Labor Relations Act, and the very group the Act was therefore supposed to benefit. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, representing the majority union of American workers from the standpoint of membership, told a union convention in Atlantic City:

"The American Federation of Labor is wholly and fully responsible for the enactment of this act. . . . But we regret that the act has been applied in many instances in a way we never dreamed of, clearly out of accord with its letter and spirit, by those with authority to administer it. . . . It is the Federation's intention to mobilize its political strength in a determined effort to amend that law, so that it shall become the real act that was sponsored and approved by the Federation."

About the only group now left opposing amendment is the minority union organization, the CIO.

It will take a nifty politician to raise the cry in the next Congress (as was raised at the last session) that the act has not been in operation long enough for a thorough diagnosis of its virtues and faults. Three years and several months is long enough for any patient to suffer before the doctor makes up his mind where the pain lies.

Stark Davis Sells Advance Hydro-Type Pumps

Stark Davis Company are now featuring the Advance Pumps, for the home dairy, resorts and industrial plants. The pumps are both for shallow and deep wells and one of the many features include that there is no wearing parts below ground level, and has only one moving part. The pumps are scientifically designed, accurately machined, rugged, durable dependability and yet economical.

The workings of the deep-pressure well is that part of the water delivered at high pressure from the centrifugal pump is directed down the pressure pipe to a nozzle thru which it flows at high velocity, thereby creating a vacuum which draws water thru the foot valve and forces it up to the suction of the pump.

The shallow well system is the same as the deep well system, except that the Hydro-Ejector is used only in the smallest size where it is necessary to provide a longer operating range and higher pressure.

Stark Davis is located in Portland at 933 SW Third avenue, phone number ATwater 4144.

Perpetual Preservation Made Possible by Use Of Concrete Vaults

There is something of beautiful tragedy around the modern burial service. Flowers, a magnificent casket, funeral music, and the stately burial service. But all this becomes ugly tragedy if we have to realize that in a few days or few weeks the elements will destroy all that which we reverence and which now lies under the sacred soil of the grave. But this need not be. The Goodman Concrete Vaults manufactured by this firm allows the beautiful memory of the last service to be unspoiled by the thought of destruction by the elements. This enterprising company has been one of the leaders in the manufacture of element proof burial vaults. They have been introduced in this community and no funeral service here is considered complete unless the casket is lowered into one of these waterproof vaults.

Friends watching the beautiful oak or mahogany casket lowered into the grave have the satisfaction that if the vault were opened twenty years hence that casket and its sacred content would be untouched and unharmed by the elements. Just as the memory of the loved ones will remain immortal, so will the earthly remains rest untouched by the subtly devastating water and dust of the grave.

Funeral directors all over the country are now realizing the desirability of advising the use of these vaults. They know that anything which will console and lessen the bereaved in the time of sorrow is worth while.

Thus the course of modern progress goes on. We are preserving the sacred traditions of the race started by the ancient Egyptians thousands of years ago. We are preserving the memory of our loved ones by insuring that those sacred remains will rest forever in peace—undisturbed.

untouched. The contemplation of this is beautiful.

Alfred E. Wheelock Attorney for Large Practice in Valley

Legal Profession is Necessary To Laymen

One of the professions that is very necessary to the well being of the average citizen is the practice of law. This profession helps guide the laymen through the legal tangles of the laws of our state and nation, helps the business man and the farmer, and the uninitiated draw up legal papers, etc. In fact the lawyer becomes, through his legal training, the guiding hand for all laymen, in all matters pertaining to both civil and criminal nature.

In this brief story the purpose of this story is not to acquaint the reader with the duties and services of the legal profession, but more, to acquaint the readers with one of our members of this profession in Portland, Alfred E. Wheelock. This lawyer is well known here, and is universally liked and respected.

His practice is of general nature and both his business methods and the man himself is well worth these few lines of praise in this review edition.

The history of our country from the beginning shows that many of the keenest minds of every generation have been attracted to the legal profession. This is, perhaps, a natural condition, since in that field exists the greatest opportunity for the exercise of intelligence and talents to service of mankind. Whatever may be the chief factor contributing to this condition it is an established fact that in mentioning the names of a given number of people who are entitled to classification as the most useful citizens of this community, the members of the legal fraternity loom large.

Among the members of the local bar who by their achievements are entitled to more than ordinary recognition is A. E. Wheelock, one of the prominent attorneys of Portland.

Broad of vision, keen resourceful and energetic he has advanced to his present position of leadership in this profession by the constant pursuit of those ideals which actuated the efforts of the early lawyers of the province in founding the bar of the state.

He has achieved his standing in the profession by constant and continuous fair dealings, loyalty to his clients and the tireless painstaking efforts he exerts in their behalf.
