FAR TOO MANY "RELIEF BUMS"

A news item tells of a Negro taxi driver who was unable to work for a time because of illness. He obtained $50 from a government relief agency to tide him over. Now he is back at work, and is trying to return the money. When it was pointed out to him that he was not legally obligated to do this, he observed that "that was the way I was raised—and that's the way I'm raising my child."

A great many other Americans can learn a lesson from this Negro taxi driver. One of the most ominous portents on the horizon is the fact that thousands of people have apparently come to look on relief as a "profession." They plan to make it their "life work." Productive jobs in private industry hold no attractions for them, when they can take it easy at the taxpayers' expense. They figure someone owes them a living.

This isn't a criticism of those people who have turned to relief only as a last resort and are eager to get off the rolls as soon as opportunity for a real job comes along. Nor is it a criticism of relief per se. The hungry must be fed, the homeless sheltered, the clothed clothed. Honest beneficiaries of relief aggressively seek real employment. Professional "relief bums" are a new menace to democratic government.

The Negro's statement was news because his attitude was so unusual today. It should be a hint about honesty to those who are lacking in ambition and desire to help themselves by honest endeavor.

Foster Road Stables

Harry Van Alst Mgr., in Portland
 Two Miles East of Lents at 13733
 SE Foster Road, Rt. 1, Box
 609, Portland, Sunset 5414

Foster Road Stables, in Portland, offers the farmers and business people of the community a most advantageous market for horses and mules conducting sales and exchange business. Have all sizes, colors and prices. All stock as represented. They are authority on the value of horses and accurate on appraisals. From almost the beginning of organized society the sale house has been one of the centers of activity that has aided in the progress of the community and been a meeting place for the buyer and seller to whose mutual advantage it was to make an exchange.

This well known concern is more than an institution of their own city as their activities extend for many miles in all directions and the buyer and seller alike journey here to do buying and selling. Offers a complete service, having all the room necessary to keep all stock until it is sold. The stock is kept under cover and shown to the best advantage.

They buy and sell horses and are conducting a growing business in this line. All animals are guaranteed to be as represented.

They are well versed in values of any kind of horses and thoroughly understand the breed and care as well as to tell just what condition they are in their age and their ability to be of service.

The reputation of this house for fair and above board methods, its general usefulness as a meeting place for the buyer and seller has brought it an ever increasing patronage from all over the surrounding territory. People recognize that this is by far the best method to dispose of stock and thus its popularity is ever on the increase. It takes a long time to find a buyer by personal sale and here there is always someone ready to pay cash on the spot. It attracts buyers from all over the country to the city.

They buy horses and mules from all the surrounding territory and furnish them to the farmers and business men at prices that are very reasonable. The management of this establishment are excellent judges of all kinds of horses and mules and are able to supply the public at prices that are very reasonable.

We are glad to compliment the Foster Road Stables upon the service they are rendering the people and would suggest to people of this part of the state to drop in and talk with the management the next time you are in town and learn the advantages of this service.

Shades Make The Homes

The homes of the Tualatin Valley are the pride of the city, and few people realize the important part played in the appearance of a home by the window shades. One man has become absolutely identified with the shade business of Oregon, and wherever shades are discussed the name of Peake the Shade Man is invariably mentioned. Mr. Peake is a pioneer in the shade business and over his years of services to home owners of the Valley, he has made thousands of friends. His suggestions are always in the best of taste, and his service cannot be duplicated anywhere else.

Mr. Peake manufactures and cleans shades and Venetian blinds, and it is not often that this paper ventures as strong a recommendation as we are able to do in this case. We urge our readers to call Peake the Shade Man for any suggestions on this essential to the well furnished home. We are confident that his service to our friends will be such that they will be grateful for our recommendation.

Peake also features the new "Kolorflor" floor covering, which looks inlaid, the color being inlaid through the weaving surface and is only $1 per yard. With all of the new construction being contemplated in this district this year we are happy that a majority of the shade work will go to such a qualified expert. Peake the Shade Man may be reached at 2122 NE Sandy boulevard or by phone at LAncaster 1681.

Scent Guides Lives of Creatures of the Wilds

The power of scent plays a vital part in the lives of all creatures of the wild. Through it they receive advance notice, by way of the air currents, of the presence of enemies, are able to recognize their kind and find mates. In fact, almost every moment of their existence is influenced by the sense of smell, and the distance over which they are able to pick up a scent is truly astonishing. Thus to the weaker fraternity the air often carries terrorizing news, while to the strong it wafts a gratifying message of a meal in prospect, according to Mack B. Stielau, secretary Detroit Izaak Walton league, in the Detroit News.

The very young of most species do not emit a scent, but whether this is due to immaturity, or a wise provision of nature to protect her helpless children, we do not know. All kindred of the wild, however, instinctively recognize the scent of their natural enemies, and either hide or hasten to get as far away from it as possible. Even while at play, time is taken out by the young to sniff the air for alien odors. This same trait may also be observed by some domestic animals.

In the insect world, smell also plays an important part and we find that the sentinel bees are able to detect and keep "foreign" kin from entering the hive. It guides the butterfly and the moth to the female, and it is said that in the pursuit they are able to discover the last spot on which she rested. Through this sense the lowly ticks which attach themselves to some animals are able to pick a suitable host on which to satisfy their unquenchable thirst for blood.

Descendants of Viking Chiefs Recall Grandeur

At Visby, picturesque capital of the island of Gotland, there is presented an historical pageant, which is a popular feature of the Scandinavian season.

Over this lovely Baltic island flies the flag of Sweden and over its turreted walls and vaulted roofs there is peace—a peace shot through with dreams of long-gone grandeur, says a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Here roses bloom in profusion where once bearded Goths prostrated themselves in worship of the sun—where later Viking chiefs sought safe harbor for their sea-weary ships and where, during the Middle ages, the all-powerful Hanseatic league established its trading center.

Here, long ago, sea-faring Gotlanders lived amid wealth and refinement, their ships the rulers of the northern seas. But their very wealth brought about their decline. Seemingly secure behind its mighty city walls, Visby allowed the tales of its great wealth to spread beyond the seas. They were minting their own gold coins, those Gotlanders—even their pigs ate from troughs of hammered silver.

Old Viking Port of Bergen

Situated at the head of the Bergensfjord and pierced by its three branches, the old Viking port of Bergen, Norway, lies wedged in between its quays and its mountains, with Floifjellet, over 1,000 feet high, rising at its back door. Tile-roofed houses in white and yellow stick to the mountain's sheer slopes like pins on a map, and a cable-car takes travelers up to Floien on its crest, where they can look down on the city and the fjord spread out below.

On the old German quay is Nordnes, the oldest part of the city, where tiny houses, jammed one against another, cling precariously to the slopes of a steep hill and narrow streets climb a zig-zag course to the top. These houses are ancient, and Bergen, in spite of its jumble of traffic, the life and color of its fish market, is an ancient city. It was founded in 1070 by King Olav Kyrre, the Peaceful, and during the Middle ages was a great port of the Hanseatic league.

Young of Some Animals Weigh Little When Born

It is claimed that new born opossums weigh about four grains as compared with the mother's weight of ten pounds. The young are born with well-developed forelegs that enable them to crawl into the maternal pouch immediately after birth, where they remain for some time.

It is stated that the kangaroo perhaps heads the list in this respect. The mother, sometimes taller than a man, gives birth to young that are less than one inch long. Both the opossum and kangaroo are the best-known members of pouched animals, called marsupials.

The young of the common black bear, that are born in hibernation, weigh about ten ounces as compared with the mother's weight of two hundred pounds or more.

These three animals undoubtedly produce the smallest young in comparison to the weight of the parents of any wild animals.

Virginia white-tailed deer give birth to fawns weighing about four pounds while the mother tips the scale at 100 to 150 pounds.
