About the Swastika

The swastika, oldest of all Aryan symbols, is definitely pre-Christian and many specimens of it have been found in the diggings of old Troy. From its rough likeness to a wheel it is associated by some with the solar motion and early worship of the sun, through the most important of its attributes, in ancient usage, is its character as a charm, a sign of benediction, of long life and good luck. It is the sacred symbol of one Buddhist sect, and from time immemorial has been known to all peoples of Asia. The fact that it was not unknown to the American Indian is held to point to early communication between the hemispheres. The word, swastika, says the Detroit News, derives from the Sanskrit "su" meaning well, and "asti" which means being. On the bust of Apollo in Vienna's famed museum of historical art is a large and unmistakable swastika, which bears out the supposed solar significance, and identifies that god, perhaps, as the first of the Austrian Nazis.

"Cavity Hollow
Tile Walls

The "Cavity" Hollow tile which was developed by the research department of the Columbia Brick Works about three years ago has had many severe tests under actual conditions and has proven it's worth without exception. This wall was developed to meet the special conditions which are required in combatting some of the severe conditions usually encountered in Oregon where a combined condition of dampness and freezing weather exist during our winter months. Basement walls especially are subjected to conditions that are as severe a test of materials as will be found anywhere in the country. Our wet fall months cause damp soil conditions around the basement and quite frequently are followed by frost and freezing weather. The success of the "Cavity" hollow tile wall is based on the method of construction. This wall is constructed of two walls of tile separated by a dead space with two walls firmly bonded together with tile cross members. None of the mortar joints go the entire distance through the wall and yet the wall is as strong as a solid wall of the same thickness. Any dampness that penetrates the outer wall will be effectively stopped by the dead air space and the absence of thru mortar joints stops any capillary attraction of moisture from penetrating that wall. Thus the outer wall may become damp while the inner wall remains dry.
The eight inch wall is ideal for basement walls for residences, exterior walls for small commercial and shop buildings, etc., while the twelve inch wall is used for storage buildings where additional frost resistance is required for root storage, nursery stock, etc.
The "Cavity" Wall has, by actual use, proved itself to be better and more economical than any other type of permanent wall, besides being fireproof, vermin proof, decay proof and frost resistant.
The credit for this excellent improvement on permanent building construction goes to the engineers of the Columbia Brick Works, who offer their facilities to anyone who has a special building problem.

Search by Smell

Some authorities assert that reptiles employ the sense of smell to locate their kind, especially at the approach of the hibernating season. Observations on newts and allied creatures have shown that they nose about in a manner which strongly indicates search by smell. Perhaps the greatest trackers among the smaller animals are members of the cat and weasel families. A mink can follow the trail of a rabbit even after it is an hour old and will tenaciously stick to it until the prey is finally run down.
