The free enterprise system, so often referred to as the "capitalistic" system, should be called, instead, the incentive system.

Under that name, believes Steelman Charles E. Hook, Americans would more fully realize the business and economic structure of the United States; realizes that success does not result from capital, but rather that capital and success are both rewards of incentive and initiative.

The "gadgets" and comforts that make up the American standard of living, Mr. Hook told the Seventh International Management Congress in Washington, have not been achieved by one individual, nor government, nor concentration of wealth. He added:

The motivating force is the free enterprise system, that is commonly called the capitalistic system. I like to call it the incentive system. Under it we have encouraged individual initiative and accomplishment through a proper compensation of those who have been willing to work hard and to make the necessary sacrifices. This encouragement of individual initiative is essential to our system. It is, in fact, its very keystone."

GLENCULLEN ITEMS

H. W. Scheel and his brother J. W. Scheel whose places adjoin, have had cement walks made around their places, in the front, sides and rear and the improvement is ideal. Alex Bergeron of Multnomah who has done cement concrete contracting for many years, did these jobs.

H. W. Scheel, SW 54 avenue and Cameron road, has a medium sized new poultry house lately completed and is raising purebred R. I. Red chickens a practical hobby with him.

Mrs. Grace Moffatt of Cameron Road, Glencullen, has had hardwood floors laid throughout her large house.

Robert Theendel lately returned from Norfolk and Shadron, Nebraska, where he has been working more than six months, mostly on farms and during haying time he and a helper or two, with good equipment, put up about 32 large stacks of hay. He says the land around that part of Nebraska is rather hilly, somewhat like it is around Multnomah, Maplewood and Garden Home. The crops this season were very good there, better by far than in many years past and the pastures are nice and green now. He suffered a badly injured back when he fell while at work shortly before leaving Oregon and now is being cared for by a local physician. Mr. Theendel makes his home with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Taylor of SW 54 and Cameron road. Mr. Taylor was for a good while a sheriff back in Nebraska.

Miss Bernice Hardtla and mother Mrs. Leva Hardtla, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Blake, all of Anasconda, Montana, who have been touring the western states and as far south as San Diego, stopped over the week end with Mr. and Mrs. George R. E. Amick of SW 54 avenue and Cameron road. Miss Hardtla is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amick and has been here twice before. Mr. Blake is superintendent of the gold mine at Southern Cross near Anasconda.

George, 14, and Billy, 13, sons of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Amick of Glencullen lately got daily paper routes as a means of earning extra money to help themselves through school and are doing very well with their paper business and like the work very much. It's a good idea to earn money they need at work they enjoy doing while getting an education.

Pioneers in Smoking

The Encyclopedia Britannica says that the introduction of the tobacco pipe to Europe is generally ascribed to Ralph Lane, first governor of Virginia; in 1586 he brought an Indian pipe to Sir Walter Raleigh and taught that courtier how to use it. Another authority, "The Social History of Smoking," says that the honor of having first smoked a pipe of tobacco in England is divided among several claimants, Captain William Middleton, Captain Price and Captain Koet having smoked together in London. The same author states that pipes were smoked in England before 1584, the plant having been introduced into Europe about 1560 and been under cultivation in England by 1570. Raleigh first brought the practice of smoking into common use and it is probable that he was initiated in the art by Thomas Hariot, whom he had sent out to Virginia for the specific purpose of inquiring into and reporting on the natural productions, including of course tobacco.

Growth of the Flea

Fleas, like all insects, go through stages, from egg, through grub and pupa, to adult insect. The grub feeds on the bodies of dead beetles and other stray animal matter. Then it turns to a pupa, which never eats, but just lies in the dust, in cracks and crevices in the floorboards in houses. It is very sensitive to vibration. Directly a footstep touches those boards, the vibration makes all the pupae wake up and hatch out. From each pops a hungry flea.

The Name Cordelia

The name Cordelia has two origins and meanings. The Celtic meaning is "jewel of the sea" and the Latin "warm of heart." Despite these attractive meanings, the name is not common. The story of Cordelia, the Welsh princess, has been told by Shakespeare in "King Lear" although the dramatist gave the story a different ending than the fact that Cordelia committed suicide when taken prisoner by her sisters.

New Fords Lately Sold

A. P. Talent, merchant of Tigard, recently purchased a new Ford sedan from Vermilye Motor Co. William Allingham is another local man to buy one of the new Fords.
