Prowlers Have
Yen for Pennies

Gaining entrance Tuesday night by breaking a front window and removing a half pane of glass, prowlers entered Greenwich Inn, operated by Peggy Kinsey and stole a quantity of cigars, cigarettes, a pocket knife, cigarette lighter, together with five hundred pennies, according to Sheriff's deputies.

L. F. Brown of Hillsboro, reports his house entered between 7:30 and 9:45 p. m. Wednesday night, and 400 pennies taken; entrance gained by cutting screen on back door.
Mr. Wilkes of Bull Mountain road reports some one cut the wire fence to his pasture Friday night and killed and butchered one of his cows; the hide, hoofs and head were left at the spot of butchering, according to the report.

Cady Doing Well
With New Station

Coming here from Kenora, Ontario, Canada, less than a month ago, R. D.
Cady, quite a young man now, acquired the service station at Glen-cullen, formerly operated by M. Zastro, and has been repainting to some extent, remodeling the interior of the building.

He lived near Lake o'th Woods, 500 square miles of water, the lake of 14,000 islands and he speaks highly of the scenic beauty of the surroundings there, 150 miles east of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Mr. Cady followed gold mining work a while but spent more time as a millwright helper at Kenora Paper Mills and this is his first venture in the service station business. He handles Standard gas and oils, Hobbs batteries and accessories, is preparing to do the best car greasing work.
N. Olson has charge of the car repair shop in connection with this station and has had many years experience in the work. When you want real service see Cady and if your car acts badly tell Olson to fix it up.

why russ is good jumper

We all know how well Russ jumps.
She is helped in this by having countless stalked oval touch-organs on the stomach-lining that communicate with the nerve supply of the intestines and loins. These, states a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine, are called the Pacinian bodies; and they are so small that, although there are 600 of them on the palm of the human hand, thousands of people live and die ignorant of their existence. But everybody knows how sensitive the palm of the hand is.
And our pet always manages to fall on her feet, when she drops from any height. She does this deliberately, aided by her peculiar internal arrangements.

Monument to Camel Driver

In the desert badlands near Quartzsite, Ariz., stands a monument of colored quartz and petrified wood inscribed to "Hi Jolly." And thereby hangs a story from a curious chapter in the history of the U. S. army. Many years ago, when the army was active in western expansion, someone was inspired to start a camel corps for patrolling the desert. Seventy-four Arabian camels and one Syrian camel driver named Hadji Ali were imported.
Though the idea at first seemed sheer inspiration, it failed for several reasons, the two chief ones being that the camels developed sore feet from sharp stones in the "badlands" and that prospectors mistook the strange beasts for apparitions and continually sniped at them.
Eventually the camels were released to wander in the desert. Had-ji Ali, whose name became Americanized into Hi Jolly, remained in the desert with the memory of his departed camels. Thirty-three years after his death, the monument was erected by the state of Arizona.

Leyden in Holland

Because of its famous university, Leyden is often called "the Northern Athens." Its ethnological museum is one of the finest in the world, and the streets ramble in all directions as they follow the Rhine. Ancient and modern gabled houses are at every turn, in Dutch Renaissance style. Of historical interest is its stately sixteenth century town hall and the haunts of the Pilgrim fathers who worshipped in St. Peter's church. The carillon chimes among the loveliest in Holland. Goldsmith, John Evelyn and Sir Thomas Browne were once students in the university. Also Grotius Arminius, Scaliger and Descartes. The university was founded by William of Orange in 1572.

Want-ads afford a common meeting place for both buyers and sellers.
