MINERALS AS A SOIL BUILDER

eating off the roots and also to stop soil skin. When the onions were harvested he found no soil skin or damage from weevil. Our agent at Yakima has a report from the Moxie hop growers of that city that these minerals not only improved the quality and quantity of the hops, but had increased the dried weight more than enough to pay for the application. Berry growers report much larger and firmer berries and a much larger yield. One asparagus grower on a two-acre test reports an increase of 30% in his yield and practically no culls. Tests on alfalfa showed the yield more than doubled. Tests on peas showed a much earlier crop and larger yield. Beans likewise not only made a more vigorous growth but bore much heavier. Those who have placed these minerals on their lawns claim they saved enough in water alone to pay for the minerals; that they did away with spots in the lawn, drove out the moss, and that pests such as earwigs, aphids, ants, etc., vanished. Tests on tomatoes showed a firmer and better flavored tomato and blight almost eliminated. One grower tried them on every other cabbage hill and reported that his cabbage looked like "Mutt and Jeff"—that they made the cabbage much larger and of superior quality. We have had so many flattering reports that we feel it our duty to urge everyone to give these minerals a trial and be convinced that they are what you
