

'This Isn't a Holdup,'Judge Tells Defendant

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.—"This isn't a hold-up," murmured Judge Harry Hoffman to a defendant, who held up both hands while being sworn in for trial on a speeding charge.

"Just your right hand, please," the judge asked as the defendant persisted.

"This isn't a hold-up," he repeated.

"Oh, isn't it?" the defendant muttered.

The defendant was fined $10 and costs.

America Has Five BreedsOf Popular Draft Horses

We have in America five well-known breeds, and all are so much alike that only an expert can tell them apart, relates Capt. Maxwell M. Corpening in the Chicago Tribune.

The Shire, Suffolk, and Clydesdale belong to the English group. The Belgian, as its name discloses, comes from Belgium, the Percheron from France. Bred nearest the fountainhead of all our draft breeds, the Belgian is the largest of the lot. Reared on low land eminently suitable for production of big horses, the Belgian has little to do from foalhood upward but to eat and grow. The Belgian government has played the leading role in improving its heavy horses.

Undoubtedly the Percheron springs from the same fountainhead in Flanders as does the Belgian. The accepted belief among historians is that on defeat of the Moors by Charles Martel in 732 the eastern stallions of the invaders were crossed with the larger horses of the low countries and the foundation of the Percheron laid in that manner. Arabian and Andalusian blood has since been infused.

Characteristic of two of the British group—the Shire and Clydesdale is the long hair on the lower legs. This is said to be true of any horse raised in the lowlands. The start of the Clydesdale occurred in 1750 when John Patterson imported from England into Scotland a black Flemish stallion. To this horse all the good Clydesdales may be traced. The Shire is traced back to the same black horse of Flanders.

Larger Animals Do NotProduce the Most Young

The larger the animal in size the smaller is the litter as a rule. Thus the average number of young born by the opossum is 18; of the rabbit, from six to eight; of the pig, ten, and of the monkey, man, cow, horse, walrus, camel and elephant, but one.

Also, states an authority in the New York Times, the larger the litter the higher is the mortality. The opossum, for example, is never able to rear more than 13 of her 18 offspring, with the probability that not more than 11 or 12 will survive. The trouble is that the opossum has only 12 serviceable nipples, instead of the 18 required for her brood. But to make up for the deficiency she has an incubator in the form of a pouch in which the prematurely born can develop. At that it is a struggle for survival, with 18 immature creatures clawing for food. Once a successful clawer has seized a nipple, he never lets go for six weeks, which explains why half a dozen of the feeble young must die. Twinning runs in families, so that it is probably a genetic trait.

Sixth Woman in ChargeOf Forestry Fire Tower

EXETER, R. I.—High up in the Pine Hill fire tower sits Mrs. Hope Andrews—the sixth woman to be fire warden there.

Taking over the job recently, Mrs. Andrews admitted it was "quite a change" from the little schoolhouse in West Greenwich where she formerly taught.

Although still confined within four walls, Mrs. Andrews now commands a view of most of Rhode Island and part of Connecticut. She learned the technical part of her job from her father-in-law, Leon Andrews, former chief of the forestry bureau.

She is on duty from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. For some reason, either design or accident, a woman always has been chosen to "man" the Exeter fire tower.

The students are members of the marine zoological class, and their eight-week stay on Appledore Island is their laboratory work. The island is one of the isles of Shoals group, and is not far from the spot where the submarine Squas sank last May.
