MR. ROOSEVELT AND PUBLIC OPINION

It will be interesting during the coming months to watch President Roosevelt and his New Deal coterie "go to the country" with the issues created by the last Congress.

Senator Alben Barkley, the Democratic Senatorial leader, suggested after a conference at the White House that members of Congress would be more amenable to Roosevelt discipline when they get back home and hear the reaction of their constituents. Yet every possible straw in the wind indicates that those who put a stop to New Deal radicalism and spending will find their people standing with them.

The elections of last year, when every Roosevelt "purgee" except one was re-nominated in the primaries, was the beginning of the trend. Then the November elections with the election of Republican governors and members of Congress, gave further point to the trend. Since then surveys of public opinion by Dr. Gallup and others have shown increased antipathy on the part of voters to continued spending and also a willingness to vote for a Republican president.

These definite factors do not indicate that members of Congress are in for trouble at home and, different from other years, when Mr. Roosevelt starts on his tour of the country to inflame sentiment, he will be confronted by an articulate opposition that answers back, instead of having the air and the headlines to himself.

Babson Says---

hours at which clerks may work in stores and other distributing agencies to the same schedule as the hours of those engaged in manufacturing.

The main purpose of the Wage and Hour Bill was to give higher wages and to create more jobs. Neither total wages nor total jobs have been increased. Merchants are observing the law. However, in order to pay more wages they are hiring fewer people; and, in order to shorten hours, are keeping open fewer hours for business. Therefore, when the great need of today is to sell more goods, stores are open fewer hours the salesmen are making fewer calls and even the facilities of our post offices and telegraph systems have been curtailed. If we want to get out of the present mess all distributors must work harder and longer.

Suspend Wage and Hour Law. Unemployment will be solved only as more people are put to work. More people will be put to work only as more goods are sold. More goods will be sold only as distributors keep their stores open longer hours, work more efficiently and are exempt from burdensome legislation. Then, and then only, will all groups have money with which to buy goods. This means that the Government should remove the "ball and chain" on all merchants today; that the taxes on storekeepers and their sales should be reduced; and that the Wage and Hour Law should be suspended for those engaged in selling until production and distribution are again in balance.

Meanwhile, August business is holding steady. My Babsonchart Index reads 97% compared with 97.5% for July and 87.6% for August of 1938. During the past week I have been working my way through the Middle West. Merchants, manufacturers and workers with whom I have talked out here confirm the statistics. I have previously received from the Middle West. Business is brisk in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois. These six states, together with Wisconsin and Minnesota, are rated as "gold" or excellent states on my sales and credit map.

Labor Fires Rekindled Right now activity in the mid-western motor cities is temporarily stalled. Assembly lines in a few plants, however, have already started wheeling off their 1940 models. Labor troubles are the one sour note in the business set-up in the Middle West. People are sick and tired of labor rows in the automobile business. It's time that Mr. Green's and Mr. Lewis' private war was killed. Its time that these gentlemen were stopped from putting the public, not only here but in all sections, "behind the eight ball."
