THE LAST STRAW

If there has remained any public doubt as to the necessity of revising the Federal government's policy toward labor relations, the latest antics of the National Labor Relations Board should point sharply to that necessity. The Board has ordered an employer to hire and give two years "back pay" to two persons who had never been employed by him.

The Board bases the order on its "findings" that the two had been discriminated against when they filed applications for jobs. According to the Board, the applications had been turned down by the employer because of their past records, and, in the eyes of the Board, the past records did not justify the employer refusing to hire them.

Public reaction to this high handed dictatorship in the matter of employer-employee relations is likely to be one of disgust with this brand of meddling in the private affairs of American citizens. It may easily prove the last straw of many piled high on the back of public patience by the meddlers since they undertook four years ago to control normal dealings between the employer and the men and women on his payroll.

Certainly an employer should still retain the right to choose who will work for him. Until recently it was about the only right he still retained, insofar as the conduct of his business was concerned. But now, it appears, he is to be forced by dictatorial decree to open his factory door to anyone who seeks a job, no matter what his past record may be. If that is the situation, there is a very real threat to the peaceful routine of earning a living, for those benefitted by the new order are those whose business it is to foment strikes and violence—at the expense of those already employed, the employer and the public at large.

This precedent-shattering theorizing by the NLRB should be an added incentive to amend the National Labor Relations Act, and attach greater importance to a thorough-going investigation of the Board by Congress.

Soil Re-Vitalizer Applied in Fall Shows Remarkable Results

A report showing truly amazing results of experiments begun last fall with McKENZIE'S Soil Re-Vitalizer has come to our desk. While the data is yet incomplete it shows (1) a uniformly great increase in yield wherever used. (2) Elimination of Curly Leaf on Peach tree; treated with McKENZIE'S Soil Re-Vitalizer. (3) A reduction in Tuberculosis among cattle due to an increased and balanced mineral content in feed grown on treated land.

McKENZIE'S Soil Re-Vitalizer is obtained from the bed of a dry lake in Northwestern Washington. It contains concentrated mineral deposits that have accumulated for years, one great function of these minerals is to restore the colloidal activity in the soil.

Colloidal activity of minerals in our soil is something that only a few of our scientific men are beginning to understand. Science has disclosed that the existence of certain minerals in our soil acts as a soil balancer or equalizer. This peculiar function of nature automatically releases the proper amount of minerals to take the place of those absorbed by the growing plants. When the supply of stored-up minerals is exhausted and these colloidal minerals are also absorbed by the plants, we say our soil is starved for it will not produce no matter how rich it looks, until more of the right kind of minerals are added. Science has also determined that the principal minerals to see up the greatest colloidal activity and renew the proper balance in the soil are Calcium, Silica, Iodine and Iron.

Other countries have already proven the value of ground rock; therefore it necessarily follows that these minerals absorbed and deposited by the action of water are not only far more valuable, but will give quicker results. Now that Tank farming has proven to us that plants absorb only the minerals out of the soil, it stands to reason that if you put the necessary minerals in any run-down soil it will produce as good a crop as virgin ground. Diseases do not attack healthy people, the same rule applies to healthy plants. We have a report on one ten-acre orchard where only two tons per acre of our natural minerals were used around fruit trees, that even the Codling Moth was found dead in the ground. It was also stated that while neighbors were having a hard time fighting diseases and pests, these trees were almost immune. The owner claims an increase of more than three thousand boxes of apples the first year, and that they had such superior flavor and keeping qualities. The dealer paid him a royalty of 10 cents a box, which alone made him over $1500.00. We have tried these minerals on peach trees and in less than three months the curly leaf had disappeared. Tests on grape vines showed a heavier yield. Tests made by government men on the Cook Ranch, near Prosser, Wash., showed an average onion yield of over 45 tons per acre, although he used only 700 pounds per acre. The grower wished to see if he could eliminate a certain weevil that was eating off the roots and also to stop sour skin.

When the onions were harvested he found no sour skin or damage from weevil. Our agent at Yakima has a report from the Mokis hop growers of that city that these minerals not only improved the quality and quantity of the hops, but had increased the dried weight more than enough to pay for the application. Berry growers report much larger and firmer berries and a much larger yield. One asparagus grower on a two-acre test reports an increase of 30% in his yield and practically no culls. Tests on alfalfa showed the yield more than doubled. Tests on peas showed a much earlier crop and larger yield. Beans likewise not only made a more vigorous growth but bore much heavier. Those who have placed these minerals on their lawns claim they saved enough in water alone to pay for the minerals; that they did away with spots in the lawn, drove out the moss, and that pests such as earwigs, aphids, ants, etc., vanished. Tests on tomatoes showed a firmer and better flavored tomato and blight almost eliminated. One grower tried them on every other cabbage hill and reported his cabbage looked like "Mutt and Jeff"—that they made the cabbage much larger and of superior quality. We have had so many flattering reports that we feel it our duty to urge every one to give these minerals a trial and be convinced that they are what you are looking for. McKENZIE'S Soil Re-Vitalizer is sold by leading hardware, grocery, seed and feed stores. It may also be obtained from the main store and warehouse at 2315 SW First Avenue, Portland. Mr. McKenzie will be glad to furnish complete information for its use and advise on particular soil problems.

We need Your help in Fighting this MENACE

On the anniversary of the Chicago Fire, America's greatest fire disaster, we observe Fire Prevention Week. It is fitting that we should reflect upon the sudden disaster that fire may bring. Millions of dollars worth of property is destroyed in this country annually resulting in great human suffering. The tragedy is that much of this could be prevented. Let us therefore, exercise more thought and care in the prevention of fires.

The one redeeming feature of this grim picture is that in most cases Insurance takes the loss
