Are you a liberal?

If you are, you believe in freedom—for the other fellow as well as for yourself. Liberalism has nothing to do with whether you are rich or poor. Thomas Jefferson, a relatively rich man, was a great liberal of his day. George Washington, who led the liberal movement which founded this country, was the most successful man in the United States. A liberal is NOT one who believes in more power for the government.

"The trouble with 'Communism,'" says Wendell Wilkie, "is not that it is too radical, but that it is too reactionary. In seeking to enslave all men to a government, it goes back to the most primitive form of government."

The New Dealers, who believe in great increase of government power, have been able to appropriate the word liberal to their reactionary doctrine.

"Liberalism," as practiced in Washington today, includes:
Pandering to Communism.
Taking the profits out of business.
Centralizing power in the hands of the chief executive.
Government by men and not by law.

Liberalism—with the other fellow's money.
Attempting to control the Supreme Court.
Bondogging with economical machinery.
Waste, extravagance and squandering unparalleled in history.

This is the phony liberalism to which they ask us to subscribe. It is time to reassess our common sense—to call things what they are.

"No nation can exist half free and half slave"—one half free from all responsibilities and obligations, living upon the other half, enslaved by excessive and exorbitant taxes.

In Santa Barbara County, California, where they "started something" with the SRA by offering to take over relief and do a good job at one-half or one-third the cost of state administration they recently appropriated $5,000 for added work, after the state had made a 40 per cent slash in relief allowances.
Only 60 out of 850 relief clients in the county reported for the extra work.
"We are smoking out the chislers with the prospect of a little hard work," says County Supervisor C. L. Preisker, "and it begins to look as if our appropriation for supplementary relief will go a long way."

the home. They insist that if we wish to continue with our present system of the family as the unit of society, we must confine the wife to her role of mother and homemaker. I think a lot of words are wasted in arguing along this line. If the family as the unit of society is going out the window, then we can not stem the tide simply by putting a new law on the books. Only a spiritual family awakening will solve the problem properly.

Real Objections are Economic
My only objection to married women working is based on cold economic grounds. Working wives take many part-time jobs, they work at lower pay scales than single women, they create a surplus of labor, they fill jobs that unemployed men could handle. The tide of resentment against the practice is rising steadily throughout the nation. I understand that two state legislatures have already adopted laws designed to force married women out of industry. Twenty-eight other legislatures have considered the subject.

Yet if legislation is to be adopted, I hope it will be practical, sensible, not too restrictive. There are hundreds and hundreds of cases that must be made exempt—cases where the wife must help support her own family, an unemployed brother's family, an aged mother or father. If any legislation is adopted, it should not automatically purge married women from industry. It should merely prohibit both husband and wife from holding certain types of jobs, especially government jobs. In many a family the wife makes a far better bread-winner than the husband. If the wife has the business ability, then why shouldn't she hold the family job while the husband stays at home and changes the baby's diapers? Should Recognize Trend

Working wives can make out a splendid case for themselves. Yet I believe they would be smarter if they recognized this rising tide of national resentment against both husbands and wives working where there is no need for both to work. They would do far better to resign their jobs now and prevent restrictive legislation—legislation which may take years to repeal. We already have too many regulations shackling employers and employees. But if wives insist on working when their husbands have good jobs, then they must face the day of reckoning.
