Invented Smoke Remover

The first practical method for the removal of smoke particles from air or fume gases was invented by an American chemist, Dr. Frederick G. Cottrell. The smoke was passed through a metal cylinder inside of which was suspended a wire, or a framework of wires. The cylinder was then charged negatively and the wire positively to a potential difference of tens of thousands of volts.

Ray Christensen Host To Employees, Families And Friends Last Sunday

Ray Christensen, builder and contractor, was host to all his employees, families and friends, at his annual picnic at Pats Acres, Sunday, August 11. One hundred and twenty five people helped consume a picnic feast on a table 95 feet long spread with fried chicken, baked ham, assorted salads and all other good picnic foods as well as 12 gallons of ice cream. Oceans of good coffee was made by Washington county's leading coffee brewer Ernest Hite. William Ruppick, painter, was head dispenser.

All spent a pleasant afternoon and evening in games, swimming and the main event of the day was a baseball game between a team chosen up by Ray Christensen on one side and Dewey The Plumber on the other. There is some doubt to who won the game but the umpire must have favored Ray Christensen in the final calculation.

A very pleasant afternoon and evening was experienced by every one there, and all are looking forward to the corresponding day next year when Ray Christensen will again be our host.

Tigard Visitor Says War Effects Type Designs

War's effects are felt even in the American field of designing printing types, Frederic W. Goudy, dean in this branch of commercial art, commented Monday while visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. A. Root in Tigard.

The elderly New Yorker, about whose accomplishments Christopher Morley once quipped "Type faces designed by other men are neat but not Goudy," explained that importation of German-fashioned type has fallen off.

Pleased by this, because he feels that printing executives are prone to ignore American designs in favor of foreign type faces. The visitor added that unsettled conditions, however, have slowed domestic designers.

"Typologia" a compilation of Goudy essays on type design and type-making, with comments, now is rolling off University of California presses in book form.

Famed Arctic Explorer Plans Trip Under Ice

Sir Hubert Wilkins is at it again—this time with a "pocket submarine" he intends to sail under the Arctic ice to set up a weather station near the North pole.

He plans to sail his tiny submarine from Fort McMurray, 200 miles north of Edmonton, Alberta, through the rivers and lakes of northern Canada to the Arctic, and thence to a spot midway between the Alaskan coast and the North pole.

The expedition would be the explorer's second attempt at Arctic exploration via the underwater route. His first endeavor, aimed at reaching the pole, failed in its objective almost a decade ago, and brought mixed criticism from fellow scientists and explorers.

Sir Hubert brought back "only a bucket of mud from the bottom of the ocean," some said.

"I have been assured it will be possible to take the vessel down the Mackenzie, and I have practically completed arrangements here for its construction," said Sir Hubert in Edmonton.
