

Lipstick--An Affront To The State!

Grandmother was old at forty. Or if she was unusually vigorous she might be forty-five before she took to sitting by the fireplace and wearing lace caps at home and "bonnets" for church.

Today a woman of forty still has a firm hold on life. Some of the glamorous ladies of Hollywood have been making pictures for 20 years. Several of our most popular actresses are frankly this old. And everywhere there are young women of forty and more still feeling, and what is more, looking young. Perhaps that is half the battle.

Grandmother frizzed her hair with curl papers and used a little rice powder now and then. Today's woman goes in frankly for permanent waves, for creams and lotions and make-up. The right use of face powder is considered a virtue and lipstick is a badge of courage with which any woman is able to face the world more bravely. Indeed, with the help of diet, exercise and cosmetics, she has gone a long way toward discovering the fountain of youth and her life of usefulness has been lengthened by a decade or more.

But across the ocean there are countries where an interest in looks is frowned on and make-up is considered an affront to the state. Woman's place is definitely in the home and her job is motherhood, or work in field or factory depending on the demands of the state. So what does it matter how she looks? The men of those countries propose to run them in their own way without feminine suggestions or advice and each year women are surrounded by more of the limitations from which we had, with such pains, escaped. A woman in these countries is no longer an individual with freedom of expression and actions. She no longer has an opportunity for higher education or a professional career of her own if her bent is that way.

The threat of the dictator countries is bad enough for men. But for woman it means the end of everything for which she has struggled for hundreds of years. Our freedom to take part in the affairs of our communities . . . to be companions to our children . . . to dress as we please and can afford . . . to be young and useful far into "middle age" all depends on living in a country whose government believes the individual is more important than the state . . . And that women are individuals as well as men!

COOPERATE WITH YOUR TRAFFIC OFFICERS AND SAVE LIVES--MOST ACCIDENTS ARE AVOIDABLE

Motorists are also urged to respect the members of school safety patrol . . . These boys are working for the safety of school children enroute to and from school. Slow down to 15 miles per hour when no one is crossing the street. You are required to stop--when someone is crossing in the marked walk. Orange lettering warns you in ample time of the approach of a crosswalk--Play safe!
