Highlights Of The State Legislature

Principal Yoder and students of Hill school, near Gaston, were the guests of Senator Fisher Tuesday. They received a cordial welcome.

Many former residents of Washington County call at Salem during the session of the legislature. Many inquire about their home town. At present we have on our desks the Hillsboro Argus, Forest Grove News-Times, Beaverton Enterprise, Aloha News and Tigard Sentinel, also the Sherwood Valley News. These visitors are very much interested in the above papers.

Paul W. Patterson, city attorney for Hillsboro, Beaverton and Gaston, accompanied by Paul Patterson, Jr., visited in Salem, Tuesday, in behalf of the League of Oregon Cities legislative program.

J. W. Stretcher, Deputy County Clerk of Washington County, was at Salem for the joint legislative Lincoln Day exercise in the House. He later visited the Senate. The courtesies of the Senate were extended to Mr. Stretcher, as captain of the Elwood, Ind., high school, with Wendell Wilkie, who was a member of the Elwood foot ball team. He said Wilkie was a terror to pack the ball for the republican party.

Messrs. Glen Halvorson and Merlin Hardin of Hillsboro, were visiting with Representatives Hesse and Kuratli Wednesday evening, and looked over the House and Senate during their visit.

The Willamette University Glee club serenaded the legislature Thursday P. M.—humming the numbers first then singing them with artistic effect—a large audience gave them plenty of encores.

C. W. Shields, in charge of the capitol grounds, stated that he believes the best results are obtained in rose culture by pruning the plants this time of year down to ten inches, leaving only four new stalks to each bush, and spraying with a light solution of lime-sulphur, about twelve to one. The variety of roses that surround the State House are the Caroline Testout, official rose of the Portland Rose Festival association. Cultivate around plants with plenty of fertilizer, and plenty of irrigation when roses are in bloom.

The Washington County delegation have received a number of resolutions from incorporated cities of Washington County, giving full support to House Bill No. 348, the League of Oregon Cities bill, providing for a share of the gasoline tax fund for the improvement of city streets. There are eight incorporated cities in Washington County, and we will be pleased to have resolutions from all the cities on our desks that we may use the same during debate on House Bill No. 348.

Mrs. Lyle Goedell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Hesse, now on a visit in the east, writes having a splendid trip—but in Chicago the temperature was 10 below—quite a contrast from Oregon's sunshine.

Representative Hesse is improving rapidly from his recent illness.

Charles Inlay, prominent miller at Reedville, was at Salem Monday on business.

Oscar Hagg, of Reedville and Joe Kendrick of Portland, are taking good care of the dairy interests at the legislature this session.

Last Thursday evening the Washington delegation had a fire side chat at the home of Representatives Hesse and Kuratli, 660 N. Cottage St., Salem. Henry Kuratli related an interesting episode which happened many years ago when old Bethany band gave band concerts in eastern Washington County when he was a member of the Bethany band. During the winter months the Bethany band gave a number of concerts in Washington County towns—one at Beaverton, in particular, was a band concert and afterwards a masquerade dance. Henry said he had a great time that night at the masquerade dance. He relates there were three girls who attended the dance: Rose, Cora and Alice Henry, and their costumes were Indian and adorned with long streamers of popcorn—every fellow who danced with the girls stole a string of popcorn—until the popcorn was gone. Those were the days when everyone had a good time. He didn't say who took the girls home—neither did Fisher!

What Happens to Labor Unions?

Babson Gives Inside Facts as to Conditions Abroad

Babson Park, Fla., Feb. 21—I have always been sympathetic with labor. During World War I, I served as Assistant Secretary of Labor in Washington. I am sure that labor leaders will tell you that I was fair in solving the problems that came to the Department; and, believe me, there were enough of them! I soon learned that arguments did not do much good, and that lawyers only messed things up. Labor troubles are emotional, not statistical, and they cannot be "fought" successfully. Both sides are usually honest and serious from their point of view.

Have a Heart

The quickest way to solve a real bad labor row is to take the employer around to the homes of the workers and see the conditions under which they live. Then have some of the strikers shadow the boss for a few days and see how he is working for them twelve to sixteen hours a day against the keenest competition. Of course, there are some labor leaders who selfishly think only of themselves. They purposely stir up trouble to get the Union to give them a raise in pay. Some are connected with wicked racketeers. These should be put in jail. Most labor leaders, however, are earnest and trustworthy men working to better the conditions of the workers as they see the light.

The chief cause of labor troubles is not the labor leader, or the wages paid, or the working conditions; but rather the expensive manner in which certain employers live, the way their children foolishly spend money, and the mistakes they make in exhibiting their power and wealth. Very few wage workers are jealous of the employer who founded the business; but it does "burn them up" to see the employers' children racing around town and blowing in money, while their own children have barely enough to eat or are unable to continue schooling. So much for where I stand on the labor problem. Furthermore, let me say that in normal
