

Takes Motor Trip From Beaverton To Grand View

Howard Weed, Thurlow Weed and Earl E. Fisher, made a trip to Grand View, Washington, Friday, leaving Beaverton 6 a. m., passing through Portland and crossing the Columbia river at Vancouver, thence East via the Evergreen Highway or North Bank route. The scenery along the Columbia Gorge is thrilling at this time of the year. East of Lyle, Washington, a boy with a red flag was by the roadside. We wondered what the danger might be—it was a flock of sheep pasturing along the highway, also nearby were a number of horses and colts.

At Mary Hill Castle recently a large vineyard has been set out—also at this point the highway turns northward with many steep sharp curves to travel 11 miles from Goldendale a large field of hay in the shocks.

To the west Centerville was in view with Mount Adams in the background, Mt. Rainier to the far right and Mt. Hood to the left. There were thousands of acres of sage brush. On nearing Goldendale, county seat of Klickitat county, we saw a flock of black sheep, also here is the timber line, not fir but pine trees in abundance. Beyond Goldendale there was snow on the top of Seminole Hills. We passed through Goldendale 8:45 a. m. There were many 60 ft trucks 12 1/2 ft. high on the highway. They are hard to pass.

At Toppish there were many herds of Hereford beef cattle grazing on irrigated alfalfa pasture. At Yakima we called on Alex Maxwell, changed cars with Mr. Maxwell at the wheel. We soon arrived at Grand View, shortly before noon, inspected about 15 acres of iris in bloom at Mr. Miller's place, leased by Mr. Weyman of New York.

In the Yakima Valley all crops flourish by intensive irrigation. At present there are 14,000 acres planned to sugar beets, the output is handled by the local sugar refinery. The hop crop in the Yakima Valley is 25,000 bales. It costs about eleven cents a pound to grow and the market price (1940 crop) is 34c a pound—sometimes the high winds blow them down—then the growers get poles shove them up again.

Visitors are impressed by the great business activity—things are booming, everybody seems to be busy.

The big sugar refinery is located at Toppish, where 35,000 packages of sugar are produced annually. From 350,000 to 400,000 tons of sugar beets are grown per year—the grower receives $9.80 to $11.00 per ton depending on sugar content. It costs $36.00 per year for water to irrigate 10 acres from April 1 to Nov. 15.

Baby beef thrive on alfalfa and beet pulp; some weigh 1100-pounds at 2 years. Fine stuff. Many Hereford bulls weigh 3000-pounds.

The potato industry in recent years has suffered by wire worms. Large acreage is being set out to asparagus and wine grapes, 350,000 gallons of wine was sold recently.

The wire worms are bad for potato growers in the Sunnyside district—the only way to eradicate is by steam 6 inches in depth, which costs about $5.00 per acre; the U. S. Government renders this service—plow 12 inches deep disc, then force hot steam 6 inches underground; kills everything.

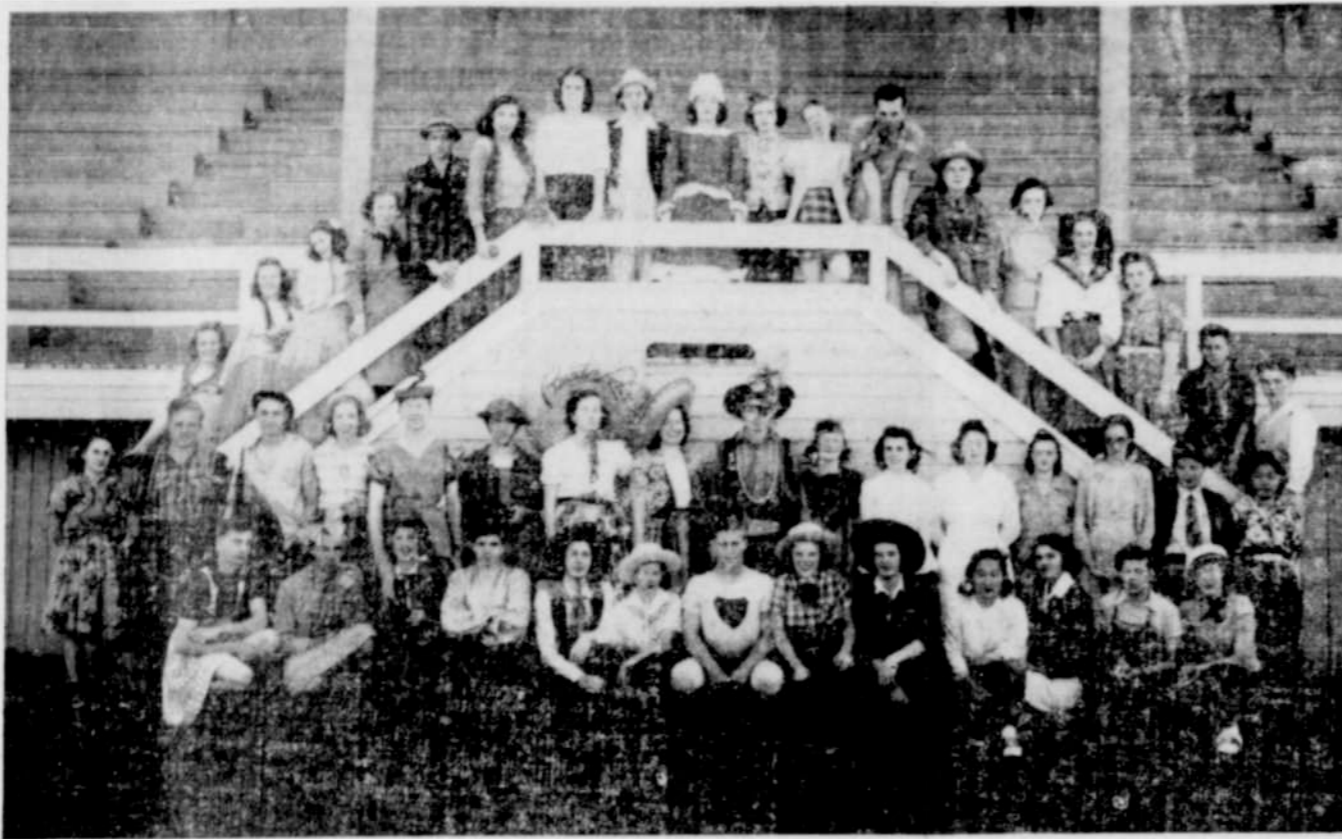

Mr. Maxwell gave us some valuable information on the Yakima Valley—also he knows where the good eats are. We were his guests at a swell lunch at a Sunnyside restaurant. He is a mighty fine fellow.

On returning to Yakima, we visited the Luke Norton Iris Gardens and saw some fine iris in bloom. Mr. and Mrs. Norton gave us a fine welcome. On our way home we passed a girl riding a cayuse also saw another girl fishing in an irrigation ditch. We could see nearby Sunnyside, Rattle Snake mountain. We were told there were lots of rattlesnakes on the south side, but we did not go over to count them.

Yakima is a great railroad center—there were 8 tracks in the train yards. There is one fellow raising buffalo up in the hills, and selling the meat to the Indians at 65c to $1.00 per lb.

It is a thrilling trip up the Yakima Valley for a keen observer—those people do things in a big way—east of the Cascades!

Elizabeth Hadley Funeral Saturday in Portland

Mrs. Elizabeth Hadley, prominent pioneer resident of Portland, and wife of LeRoy Hadley, passed away on Sunday at their home on SW Shattuck Rd. in Glencullen, following an extended illness.

Born in St. Louis, Chicago, March 1, 1869, she spent a part of her life there. In 1901 she came to Portland with her husband and children and she assisted Mr. Hadley in his business where he was co-owner of a trucking establishment.

Mrs. Hadley studied the art of weaving under Ray Duncan and his wife, a Greek noblewoman. She became so expert at the art that she afterwards was one of the most outstanding women along that line in the west. Some of her excellent work has been exhibited at guild booths both in California and in Oregon, including the University of California Applied Arts Guild where she was also called upon to lecture.

In the early days of Settlement work in Portland Mrs. Hadley gave freely of her time and efforts to assist Mrs. Henry Ladd Corbett in teaching weaving and handwork to the people of the settlement. Her daughter now Mrs. F. M. DeNeff worked with her.

In 1927 Mrs. Hadley was signally honored by a request from the director of the Smithsonian Institute of Washington D. C. to have an especial exhibition of her work on display at the Institute.

In spite of her years of ill health she had many friends whom she enjoyed, and corresponded much. Her first interests were her home, her beautiful flower garden on Shattuck road, where she had resided with Mr. Hadley since 1913, and her friends. Mrs. Hadley was held in high esteem and loved by her many friends and neighbors.

She is survived by her husband and three children, Mrs. J. E. Girlich, Fulton, Mo.; Mrs. Frederick DeNeff, Portland; and F. Com. Frank D. Higbee, formerly of Astoria, now stationed in San Pedro, Cal. Three grandchildren in Portland and three in California are left to mourn her loss.
