AMERICANISM

Americanism is love of country, loyalty to its institutions and ideals, eagerness to defend it against all enemies, undivided allegiance to the flag, and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and posterity.

REDS and NAZI

From the first, the Reds were fanatics; a people gripped by one idea. It was that all title to private property the world over, must be wiped out. Your factory, home, farm, store and all else must go into the new world order. Fanatics also are Hitler's youth. He bred them to the one thought that they alone are fit to rule over the peoples of the earth. There you see them, two vast armies of blind zealots, the Red and the Nazi, each driven by the frenzied belief that his idea must conquer over land and sea.

What of young America; has it a driving hope? Outside of sports and making money and a home life the good American youth, does anything grip our youth? Can they come into a destiny on such a text as—"Let us eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we die?" Drifting down into drunkenness and crime, refusing to give God one day in seven, shall America survive?

First—"When they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful."—Bible. Next follows lawlessness and after that uncleanness; then the break-up. So a church, the home and the school to train up a God-fearing generation, church and home and school on the but to-day we are under sold on we are undersold on church and home and school. The little red schoolhouse with its emphasis on religion has blossomed into the Union High that bulks so far across the country. But with only one scholar in five out of the grades and one in six of the High School attending Sunday School, will we become a God-fearing people?

Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord, says the Good Book. Since that line was penned in the long ago, a lot of them have sprung up, become goddess and sunk beneath the waves. So we join the cry that rises over the land—BACK TO THE BIBLE. And coming back to the Book our fathers may we, with them find our hearts settled on Christ as the Savior who took over our death sentence and died under it to save us. So we go free. So we forward march, fulfilling our duty to God and man with the indwelling Christ, our strength, joy, peace and Victory every hour of the living day. This space paid for by an Oregon businessman.

good crop year in Europe will in a large measure greatly help solve the food problem. Their lack of raw materials, however, will make it difficult to make machines, clothing, bedding, and many other things for years to come. We will have to help these people in one of two ways:

(1) With our warehouses full to overflowing with raw cotton and other products and manufacturing setup geared to convert these into finished goods, we can continue to tax our over-taxed people by buying such new finished goods from our manufacturers and shipping them to needy nations; or (2) we can organize trade-in centers, selling our new goods to our own people and shipping the used goods abroad. I earnestly urge the latter policy.

Establish Trade-in Centers
We could have trade-in setups in all the trade centers of our nation without any more government employees. We have plenty of Federal setups now functioning which can be used for this purpose. To these centers our consuming public could carry their used-goods and, after having such goods appraised receive a trade-in certificate from the Federal Appraiser. This certificate, if used in ten days, would be good as cash in the purchase of new machinery and goods costing three times the face value of the certificate. The used machinery and goods would be for export. In fact, no new products should be allowed to leave the country except as paid for by cash.

We will have accomplished the following: Remove from the channels of domestic trade enough used goods so that our consumers are able to replace such used goods with new merchandise. Two-thirds of the cost would be paid for by the one benefiting most. As the consumer buys from the retailer, the retailer from the jobber, and the jobber from the manufacturer, we will have three direct ways for meeting this cost from those who will receive this new business. Such a cost collected from a business transaction resulting in profit is the easiest money to collect, especially if such money is used solely for producing new business for the firm paying the same.

Reorganizing Relief
We formerly depended on the generosity of relatives and our immediate communities to care for the needy of our nation who were unable to care for themselves. This may yet be the most satisfactory method of handling the problem. We now, however, tax our people to secure the funds necessary for this purpose. Very often relief is made too attractive and our taxed public is needlessly imposed upon. It is our duty to care for the unfortunate people in our community but aside from making them comfortable it is not our duty to make such relief attractive. If a trade-in setup were operating in a community there would be an over-supply of used goods which could be made sanitary and given to those needing the same. Such goods would make these people comfortable, yet such relief would not undermine the character of our people as does the present system.

A Business Safety Valve
The trade-in idea is simple. Our Federal Government would have a way for producing increased consumption of finished goods as the need arose simply by increasing the allowance for such goods offered for trade-in. Then, in inflationary times when our Government wishes to discourage trade, it could lower or remove altogether the trade allowances. This would provide employers, wage workers, and investors a much-needed automatic regulator. Why wait until the War is over before trying out such a system?

LIEUTENANT R. E. DOUGLAS

Lieutenant R. E. Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Douglas of West Slope, one of three army fliers forced to parachute from an army observation plane near Stayton Saturday afternoon. The plane for some unknown reason, went into a tail spin at 12,000 feet, crashing in a cornfield, then exploded and burned. Wreckage was scattered over a wide area. Douglas was treated for a bruised forehead, the other two fliers being unhurt.

The plane was enroute to Portland air base from its own base at Salinas, Calif., when the mishap occurred. It was to have participated in forthcoming maneuvers in Oregon.

Douglas was a graduate of Grant high school in Portland, attended the University of Oregon, the Northwestern College of Law and University of Portland. He is a former A. A. U. wrestling champion.

WHITFORD

C. B. Gardner returned from Southern Nebraska, where he had gone to visit a very sick sister whom he had not seen for forty one years. She was slightly improved when he reached there. A group of relatives came to see him soon after his arrival, thirty-five in all, not one had he ever seen. He enjoyed his trip and visit and left his sister gaining in strength.

The Whitford Neighborhood club met at the home of Mrs. Grace Wilson on the 20th, the second meeting for the month. Much to the delight of the ladies the quilt they have been working on for so long was finished and a committee appointed to present it to the Red Cross at Hillsboro and bring back sewing to be done. The hostess served cake and coffee.

The corn from the farms in this community has all been put in the silo. A fine crop was harvested, all without the help of horses. There were fifty at Sunday School and church. Mr. Walker delivered the message and two young ladies from Portland sang a solo.

Slugs Damage Crimson Clover Seedlings Here

Slugs have done considerable damage to local crimson clover seedlings. They are a scourge to some extent at this time on hairy vetch and there is every indication that the situation may become more serious. Where bait has been applied before the crop is through the ground, improved stands and less injury are quite apparent, according to W. F. Cyrus, county agent.

If baiting is delayed until the crop is through the ground, there is so much feed for the slugs that they take the bait less readily, says the county agent. He pounds of bait per acre as was first advised is a larger quantity than is necessary. Four or five pounds per acre, particularly of the pellet form of bait, is adequate if it is evenly distributed, says Cyrus. This should be broadcast on top of the ground soon after the crop is seeded, or at least before the crop is through the ground. The bait retains its effectiveness for several days and good results can be expected for a reasonable time after its application. Only the baits made with bran, metaldyde and calcium arsenate are recommended. Baits containing only the metaldyde without the calcium arsenate are not recommended.
