

Burlap Bagging Made Available

Additional supplies of burlap for bagging wool and seed potatoes have been made available by the War Production Board, the Washington County USDA War Board has been informed. Conservation of existing supplies of burlap bags is still necessary, however, John W. Kamna, chairman of the county war board warns.

Use No Hooks should be the definite policy of every farmer in handling sacks, according to county agent Cyrus. Burlap supplies will continue to be very short, as the war has removed the principal source of burlap imports.

While the additional supplies of burlap affect only the demand for wool and seed potato sacks, and there are only a relatively small amount of these products in Washington County, the increased allotment is of some local importance. Any increase in allotment of burlap for some crops, even though of no special importance locally, means that much less drain on the supply that could be made into sacks for locally produced crops.

Washington County farmers can do much to relieve the sack situation next summer if they will prepare now to provide storage at home for their own feed grains and particularly for the screenings from the pea and vetch seed. Probably our most pronounced difficulty will come in the supply of sacks for seed from combine to the cleaner.

Where farmers desire bags for seed potatoes or to sack wool, they should provide their bag manufacturer with the following statement: The undersigned hereby certifies to his vendor and to the War Production Board, that the Agricultural Bags covered by the annexed purchase order are needed for packing and shipping of (insert here, wool, or seed potatoes, as the case may be) and they are needed by him for such use by him or for distribution to others for use by them; that to the best of the undersigned's knowledge and belief, such sacks will be used within the next thirty days after (insert here the date when receipt of bags is required).

County Groups to Seek Solution of Farm Labor Needs

One more step toward providing farm labor for growing and harvesting this year's crops has just been taken with arrangements for appointing a farm labor sub-committee to be added to the agricultural planning committee in each county. Details of this plan have been worked out jointly by L. C. Stoll, director of the Federal Employment service for Oregon and W. L. Teutsch, assistant director of the federal cooperative extension service at O. S. C.

A supply of farm labor adequate to the production and harvesting of 1942 crops is recognized as a major problem in the fulfillment of the food-for-victory program in this state. We Teutsch in announcing the plan. We hope that this plan will make use of the best local judgment available on this problem.

Creation of a farm labor sub-committee with a broad representative membership will coordinate the activity of the Federal Employment service, the county war board, the land use planning committee, and the agricultural planning committee, it is believed. In addition it will give representation on the committee of the major commodities with large farm labor requirements.

Fertilizer Prices Now Operate Under Ceiling

Oregon farmers who may need to obtain fertilizer to carry out their food production plans for the year will be protected against price increases by recent action of the OPA in freezing prices of certain kinds of fertilizer.

The order already covers mixed fertilizers, phosphates and potash, while a further order affecting nitrogen fertilizers is expected to follow. The original order provided that prices must go no higher than those prevailing between February 16 to 20, inclusive. This action constituted a 60-day regulation to be supplanted by a permanent order before the expiration of that period. It covers fertilizer sales to a minimum of 250 pounds, although small lot sales will also be scrutinized.

In issuing the order, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said that with farmers being called upon to produce as never before, they have a right to obtain fertilizer at an uninfated price.

Baby Pig Losses Reported Heavy

Oregon swine breeders are experiencing a rather heavy loss of three and four days old baby pigs, according to the animal division of the state department of agriculture. Some investigations showed the condition to be due to a shortage of milk, which in turn is a condition engendered by faulty feeding and preparation of the sow.

Most sows need a considerable amount of protein if they are to farrow a good sized litter of healthy pigs, tankage or meat products will provide such protein, but in the case of meat products care should be taken that it is cooked and from the carcass of a farm animal that died from causes other than some infectious disease.

Molasses and ground alfalfa meal will make good supplements to prepare the sow for successful farrowing. Molasses and other carbohydrate foods will help supply these necessary materials.

Bee and Produce Licenses Due

Produce dealers in the Portland area may send their applications to the Portland branch office of the department, 513 Oregon building, Portland; others remit to Salem headquarters.
