"Graveyard" Scrap Iron

If the metals in the literally millions of obsolete automobiles now in junk yards along the highways and byways are reclaimed, they will not only provide valuable defense material, but would also rid the country of conspicuous eyesores, according to the Oregon State Motor association.

On the basis of report it is estimated that around 7,000,000 junked cars are now piled up in various parts of the country, and will yield around five million tons of scrap steel, in addition to aluminum, copper and brass.

Heretofore, junk cars have been allowed to pile up for use in salvaging parts for repairs to vehicles. Thus the organized effort to reclaim the materials in these derelict automobiles is certain to stimulate the removal of unsightly piles of junked cars. This is particularly true of old frames which have remained after parts were salvaged.

Another advantage is the widespread employment of labor to separate the various types of metal for shipment to reclamation plants. The heavy demand for scrap metal may lead to the end of the Automobile "Graveyard."

Gas, or City Hunger

Warning that too drastic restriction of gasoline for farmers' passenger cars might endanger movement to market of vital foods essential to wartime health, Fred S. Sexauer, president of the Dairywomen's League Cooperative association, recently urged that the government give special consideration to farmers when fixing gas quotas.

"It appears obvious," he continued, "that gasoline will be allotted to farmers for trucks and tractors, but it is vital that they also have fuel for their passenger cars. Farmers have to make many trips to town for supplies, and it often happens that it is more saving of gasoline and tires to drive the family car than to use a heavy truck. Perhaps more important is the fact that many farmers use their cars to take fresh vegetables, fruits and other produce to market."

If farmers can't get adequate gas for their cars, it will in many cases isolate them, and make deliveries of food to urban localities impossible. In the interest of the public health, we must keep farm cars in motion.

Wholesale evictions of war workers by landlords attempting to evade maximum rent regulations by bringing in new tenants at higher rents, according to the office of Price Administration.

Beginning May 18, retail prices may not exceed highest levels charged by the seller during March and every retail store must display publicly the ceiling prices for "cost-of-living" commodities.

The federal board has ruled installment purchases must be liquidated within 12 months and placed new limitations on charge accounts. Loans of $1500 or less to be met in one payment must mature within 90 days. The board also made down payments, ranging from one-fifth to one-third the purchase price, mandatory on all payments.

There was less give in the two-way stretch today.

The War Production Board has reduced the amount of elastic fabric in corsets, girdles and other similar women's apparel in order to make supplies last longer. Production has also been curtailed by 25 per cent.

Included in this group from Multnomah is Mary A. Sanders, bachelor of science in nursing.

Don't make the steering wheel a wheel of chance. Remember that when you gamble with safety, you bet your life!

You cannot be saved by valor and devotion to your ancestors; to each generation comes its patriotic duty; and upon your willingness to sacrifice and endure, as those before you have sacrificed and endured, rests the national hope. — Charles Evans Hughes.

Cascara Bark Has Interesting History

By Cecil Callison

When the Spanish padres pushed northward along the California coast, building the famed Camino Real and numerous Missions, they learned of a native tree whose bark had tonic properties. Believing the tree to be the same as that from which wood Noah built the Ark, the padres named it Cascara Sagrada, or Sacred Bark.

When Lewis and Clark first journeyed down the Columbia River in 1804, the Coastal Indian tribes were observed to be using a laxative tonic made from the bark of a tree called Chittum Wood. Returning east, the expedition carried seeds of the tree which were given to a Philadelphia botanist named Pursh. In his botanical gardens, Dr. Pursh grew several trees, made extracts from the bark and experimented widely in its use and properties. Later in Paris a pharmacist named M. de Candolle obtained Cascara Bark from Dr. Pursh and continued the experimental work. In honor of these two pioneers the drug is now known botanically as Rhamnus Purshiana de Candolle.

As early as 1870, Cascara extract became known to the medical profession as a constructive tonic laxative, and since that time its use has increased steadily throughout the civilized world. So far as is known, it is one of the few if not the only non-habit-forming laxatives available.

The Cascara tree grows wild in a limited area, the western slopes of Southern British Columbia, western Washington and Oregon, and northwestern California. Each summer while the sap is flowing, local residents throughout this area peel, dry and sell through local agents, a crop of Cascara Bark which yields them an average annual income of about $400,000. The trees are fairly plentiful, especially on land which was logged from 15 to 30 years ago. Cascara seeds itself and grows well among the second growth found on old logging works.

High school students on vacation, farmers and their wives and children, as well as a scattering of professional peelers, find pleasure and profit in peeling Cascara Bark. Professional experts are earning as much as $30 in a single day.

Because of the many new Army and Navy hospitals now in use, demand for Cascara Bark has materially increased. To bring out a sufficient crop of this vitally important drug, the price is at a current level of 15c per pound for dry sanded bark, which is highest on record. Peelers are urged to peel all they possibly can, but to conserve future crops, and to reduce forest fire hazard, they should observe the following rules:

1. Trees should be felled prior to peeling. New sprouts will spring from the stumps and provide a new crop in a very few years.
2. Trees smaller than 3 inches should not be peeled.
3. Bark should not be peeled from stumps.
4. Limbs and branches should be peeled down to a diameter of one inch.
5. Peelers should take every precaution against starting or spreading of fires.
6. Obtain written permission from the land owner.

State Guernsey Makes State Champion Record

Peterborough, N. H., May 29—Wandamere Bonnie Jean 635163 has just completed a record which makes her queen of all two year old Oregon Guernseys in class GG of The American Guernsey Cattle Club. Jean was bred and is owned by M. C. Fleming of Troutdale, Oregon, and in one year made a record of 1422.9 pounds of milk and 682.1 pounds of butter fat.

According to the best information available, the average work-week for employees in manufacturing industries in the United States is 41½ hours. Industrial workers in Great Britain put in 56 hours a week on the average. In Germany the average is 60 hours, while in Japan it is 70 hours.

Spring Thoughts

Hello Folks: You know this is the time of the year when the poets and the mockin' birds brake out fer the oil fields in Russia. Japan invades one place too many as the Sons of Heaven. Mussolini takes another look at the moon and the map a tryin' to restore his Roman Empire from Hitler, our polychrome mix up in another election to see who will be the Inns and Outs. Taken all, in all, Spring is a bully time fer brandin' cattle, hosses, etc., if the brand would hold 'em like the ole days, but it takes more to hold any thing nowadays than a brand stamped on 'em.

With thousands of workers needed for increased production in agriculture and war-time industry—the active file of Oregon's unemployed registered with 22 local offices of the United States Employment Service has now dropped to 17,532, the lowest figure ever reported for the state.

Of the total 11,722 are men and 5,810 women. The Portland office, including Washington, Columbia and Multnomah counties, has 8,294 seeking jobs. The state's total compares with 33,815 a year ago and over 90,000 during the 1938 layoff. The lowest previous figure, 19,185, was on September 30, last.

Because only a few of the unemployed are skilled workmen, the training program is gaining momentum. With many industries unable to wait for fully trained men and women, a gradual shift from pre-employment to supplementary training is taking place. Of those in classes recruited by the employment offices, 5,200 are working while 2,400 are not yet on the job.

Placements also show increases, particularly in defense areas. Last month 9,416 were placed, 1,109 of which were in agriculture. Portland accounted for 3,093 with Klamath Falls reported 997; Pendleton, 726; Salem, 487; Albany, 376; Medford, 333.

Fitting into the same pattern are abrupt drops in new and continued claims for unemployment insurance. Local offices last week took only 196 new claims, of which 77 were against other states. Continued claims were 2,745 against 4,818 for the same week a year ago.

AMONG THE COBRAS

See the King's Son let Himself down into the pit among the cobras and vipers to rescue Little Rags, the child of the drunken sot—the sot who stoned the King's carriage and muddled the front door of the palace.

Why the King's Son? Because of all who breathe, He alone is viper-proof. The venom could not enter His blood stream. And why rescue such a frail, sickly outcast as Little Rags? It is because the King loves every subject in the realm, even to Little Rags and would see them, every one, made fit and clothed in royal robes.

And who are the King, the Prince and Little Rags? In this picture God is the King Christ, the Prince, and Little Rags stands for you and me and all who have ever sinned.

Now turn to the Bible and learn what goes on behind the scenes. The Book shows us as made over and become one of a new race dwelling here for a time and over in the glory land forever. Heaven has a new photo of you. It shows your sins lifted off and put on Another, for—"The Lord hath laid on Him—the iniquity of us all." Call the roll. Murderers, thieves, liars, the unclean, the crook and vicious, all of us who have sinned, stand cleared with not the scratch of a pen against us. One by one, mankind all made new so far as they will let it be so.

The redeemed of the Lord are under orders to go out as ambassadors and shout to all mankind to face about and see God as the Great Lover. Face about; look his way; see how he has done all to prove his love to whoever has defied his right to rule their lives. He has taken away all your guilt; he stands waiting to breathe himself into your soul and create you anew.

So sure as you go on facing away from the light, the door must at the end close against you. Out there you find yourself to be forever with the weeping and the wailing.

Do you take clearance on the ground that Christ paid the debt for your sins? You wish no more to serve the world, the flesh and the devil? You count yourself as saved out of the world to live unto God? Then step ahead into your new life looking to Christ for the power to make it thru. Look away from self and utterly to Him. He waits to become to you Cheer-Joy-Hope-Peace-Wisdom all the way all the day.
