

INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS AFTER THE WAR

Every American knows that the manufacture of automobiles has ceased for the duration of the war.

The great automobile industry which in 1940 produced and sold more than 3½ million cars, has been re-tooled to produce airplanes, guns, tanks and munitions of war. Where will these companies get the money necessary to resume the manufacture of automobiles when the war is ended?

The automobile industry happens to be important, and there are thousands of smaller industries which will also face the same problem.

What will the millions of workers do when the demand for war machines stops?

What will happen to the domestic market for farm products when those millions of war workers no longer have jobs?

The stage seems set for an even worse depression after World War II than we suffered after World War I unless right now we start to plan about these surpluses.

It is comforting to learn that Congress is now considering some plan to prevent, or at least to ease, any after-the-war depression.

War Profits for Peace-Time Recovery.

The best plan seems to contemplate the dedication of a portion of war profits for the purpose of providing industry with the ready cash on hand to quickly change to peacetime activity and thus lessen the shock to manufacturing and agricultural surpluses when the war is ended.

A Recovery Bond program has been suggested whereby each industry, big and little, will be required to invest at least 20 per cent of its war profits in Recovery Bonds which do not bear interest until the war is ended and which cannot be sold by the purchaser until peace is declared.

Such a plan would build, at the rate of almost a billion dollars a year, a huge recovery reserve to convert war industries to peace production, launch new products and maintain employment. It would place this reserve immediately and automatically in the hands of those businesses and industries with the greatest after-the-war needs.

The moment peace is declared the "time lock" automatically releases this recovery reserve, the bonds become negotiable and begin to draw interest. Purchasers holding them will then treat them like any other Government bonds, to be sold or used to borrow money. There would be no waiting for a post-war Congressional appropriation, no red tape, and no delay in launching the business and industry offensive that may turn threatened depression into unrelieved prosperity.

The plan is simple, practical and fair.

During late years science and research have discovered many new uses for present major farm crops and many new crops which can be used in industry. A plan of this character places immediately in the hands of industry the resources which can be used to finance further research and to plan for the conversion of surplus crops, surplus factory buildings and the employment of war workers in new and useful enterprises whenever this war shall cease and normal peacetime industry, business and agriculture shall be resumed.

This problem deserves the thoughtful consideration of every American. If we can have the assurance of reasonable security in the after-the-war recovery period we can throw ourselves into an all-out effort to win the war and feel that by so doing we have secured "the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

Multnomah Sailor Does Double Duty

A young Portland sailor, Everett Alvin Hay, 19, serves Uncle Sam in two capacities. A regular member of the navy, he has been selected to do part-time medical corps duty in the marines.

Hay is a pharmacist's mate, second class. He is the son of Mrs. Maxine Hay of Multnomah and has been in the navy two years.

Before his enlistment Hay was a junior golf champion here and spent his spare time working as a caddy. He also was known in Portland as a guitar player. He has taken his guitar to sea and in one of the South sea islands a native chief recently offered him his finest canoe in exchange for the guitar. Hay wrote his mother that he did not make the trade.

He attended Tigard high school and Benson Tech. where he received a letter for golf. He has been on active duty overseas since last July.

Her brother, Theodore, has been in the navy four months, and her husband, a sergeant in the army, left for overseas duty shortly before Christmas. Her mother and four younger children of the family live in Portland. Mrs. DeBauw left Monday night for a visit with her husband, who is on furlough in New York.

Mrs. Brannfors will be called to duty with the WAAC's in Oklahoma City in mid-January, going later to Dayton Beach for training.

LIBRARY NOTES

Home is Here by Sidney Meller is a warm and interesting book of the Dorelli family and their life and neighbors on Telegraph Hill overlooking San Francisco Bay.

Alano Dorelli about the year 1907 wanders onto Telegraph Hill and meets a Genoese, Benedetto, with whom he takes up lodgings in R. Alley.

Beneditto and his wife, Maria, become close friends of Alano's and persuade him to buy a lot on the alley. Thrilled at becoming a property owner, though in debt, because of it, Alano writes the news to his wife, Lucia, in Lambray, and after considerable objection she brings four of her five children to America.

The greater part of the book tells of the feuds and scandals, births and deaths, and christenings, and fiestas of these people.

This is something different and should be enjoyed by the Beaverton library users.
