Better Prepared

At a time when farmers' co-operations are suggestions. Choose your physician the surge of war, it is a good plan for members to examine the stuff their organizations are made of, and how they were built in the beginning. Cooperatives that have been built soundly from the individual farmer up, and have been properly managed and managed, are better prepared to stand the stress of these turbulent times than the ordinary business concern. Members of such co-operations are fortunate. Farmers had no such protection and hope in the other world war.—Dairymen's League News.

Do Your Part

The ideal citizen can help relieve the wartime medical problem. Here means that you cannot buy into a clinic carefully and stick to him. Make appointments for visits as early as possible. Whenever advisable visit the physician's office instead of expecting him to call at your home. Write down all important facts you want to tell him. Tell him all symptoms which have any bearing on your physical welfare. Have confidence in him. Write down his orders and make sure you understand them. Public cooperation can go far toward eliminating the "doctor shortage."

LET THE DEAD LAY

No! No! Lord! Leave the stone as it is and let the tomb stay closed. My brother Lazarus has been dead four days already and his body will send out the stench. So Martha, the sister of the dead man, tells Jesus. But Jesus did not stop them and the stone was rolled back. Then Jesus gave a loud cry—LAZARUS COME FORTH and at that a long white object, borne by unseen hands moved out of the tomb. It was shaped like a man's body, wide at the shoulders and tapering to the feet. On through the air it moved till placed before the sisters, Martha and Mary. Look, it holds life; there is movement within. Loose him and let him go, commands Jesus and one steps up to lift the napkin from the face. LAZARUS! Yes, smiling and in full health, Lazarus, dead four days, springs to his feet, with not one trace of disease nor odor of the grave. Read it for yourself, John's Gospel, Chapter 11th.

And why not such a miracle as this? As God the Father has power to raise the dead, and breathe life into them, so has the Son that same power. Not only did He raise Lazarus, but He is to raise back to life all the dead. He is to bring up the saved for reward and the lost dead for judgment. Christ is to sit as Judge and He alone is fitted for that office, for He lived here among men, tempted as we are at every point, yet He sinned not. If you reject Him here and now as Lord and Saviour, you will stand speechless before Him on the Judgment Day with the sins of a lifetime rising up to condemn you.

All are to be raised but not all are to come into condemnation—Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth My word and believeth on him that sent Me, hath eternal life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life, Christ's word. See John 5:24. All are to be raised back to life, but not on the same day. First, the saved are to be brought forth for reward in bodies of glory. Then, a thousand years later the lost dead will be brought before Christ for judgment. These lost go out into the weeping and the wailing and into the pit prepared for the devil and his angels. John 5:28-29 and Revelation 20:5.

Lord, lay some soul upon my heart and love that soul through me and may I nobly do my part to win that soul to Thee.

Time to Slice Bread

American housewives will have to learn a new art—beginning January 18—it's slicing of a loaf of bread.

Bakers after that date will not slice any more bread during the duration.

Housewives will have to watch their fingers during the slicing, and it might be a good idea to place the phone number of the family physician in a prominent place. Junior had better not try his luck until mother has mastered the art and becomes an expert teacher.

Knives will keep their edge much better if they are hung on the wall and not placed in a drawer with other kitchen utensils—another advantage of hanging the knives high is so that children will not try their luck slicing bread while mother is bragging on her luck over the phone to a neighbor.

18% OF HER PAY GOES INTO WAR BONDS

War Plant Worker Buys Bonds for Warrior Husband

Although she has two children to support on her wages as a power press operator at a war plant, Mrs. Mabel W. puts 18% of her pay every week into War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Mrs. W. thinks of every bond she buys in terms of what it can do for her soldier husband out in Australia. "Already," she says, "I've bought Jim a Garand rifle and a gas mask in War Bonds. I feel I'm helping to bring him back safe and sound!"

 Maybe you can't save as much as 18% of your salary in War Bonds. But

A Plan to Protect Agriculture After This War

For years the tragic results of the expansion of food-producing acreage during World War I has haunted American agriculture. Every farmer, as a matter of patriotism, interrupted his rotation of crops to produce food and more food for our armies and our Allies. Now again in World War II, to feed our soldiers and our Allies and to serve the special demands of war industry, we are displacing our normal production as a matter of patriotic service.

It seems plain that by the end of this war American farms will have created a tremendous surplus production power which ordinary peacetime requirements will not absorb. By the end of 1942 our overall average increase production over the average for the last 10 years will be more than 21 per cent. How then can American agriculture side-step a post-war farm tragedy even worse than that following World War I?

Experiments in Rubber and Other Products

Our Government is now experimenting with domestic sources for rubber. Some sixty thousand acres are devoted to the production of guayule and its possibilities as a source of domestic rubber. Emergency plants for the production of thousands of tons of synthetic rubber from oil and alcohol are now springing into production.

We have learned how to make paper from slash pine and starch from potatoes. We are learning how to raise medicinal herbs which we formerly imported.

Denied the use of kapok which we imported from the East Indies and used in life preservers, we have discovered that the floss from milkweed makes better life preservers than kapok ever did. Factories have been built and several thousand acres are now devoted to raising milkweed intensively.

Already we are producing tung oil successfully. Thousands of acres will be needed before we can supply even our present domestic market.

Luckily, we have at hand the National Farm Chemurgic Council, an organization of research chemists from our several industries who compare notes and gain new enthusiasm in the research for new uses of old crops and new crops which can be cultivated in America. Our government has established regional research laboratories.

More than fifteen thousand different kinds of plants grow in the natural state in the United States. We use less than three hundred of these plants. Farm chemurgy will not be complete, nor the post-war problem of agriculture solved until every plant is re-examined in the light of modern science and made to serve its part in contributing to the comfort, happiness and security of our America of the future.

A Plan That Deserves Support

The United States Senate is considering a plan which will require the use of 20 per cent of war profits during the war for the purchase of Recovery Bonds by each company in order to have available the necessary cash to quickly change their business and industrial plants back to peacetime activities at the close of the war and to adjust the employment of their normal number of factory workers.

This percentage of war profits could also be used in a broad plan of research by industrial chemists to develop new uses for products of the farm by our domestic industry. If our industry has the knowledge and the money in hand to convert an all-out war effort to peacetime production, maintain employment and launch the new products discovered by science, we have a reasonable chance to absorb our farm surplus even in the post-war period.

Depression hit our rural areas longer and harder than our industrial areas. Our hope for the security, happiness and prosperity of Rural America is at stake. If we can develop this practical plan for taking care of our surplus in the after war period, we can go forward unafraid in an all-out production effort for the winning of this war and in providing the food necessary for starving people in the after war period. We will know that we have provided an ever-expanding America with new crops and new uses. Worth thinking about.

After Christmas What?

Hello Folks:

Well I have passed through another Christmas card battle and packages nearly swamped the post offices like heavy artillery ammunition.

I hope we can get Hitler and his bloody axis bunch turned down by another Christmas so we won't have to wring hell fire out of the skies to promote peace on earth. But that's the only language the Axis bunch can understand right now, you know peace is such a grand thing, it's well worth fighting for.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Stop Spending, and Save for the future. That has been good advice since biblical days. You cannot buy tires today, but you can start saving to buy that new set of tires when they go on the market again.

Your regular investment of ten percent or more of your earnings in War Bonds through your Payroll Savings Plan will provide the necessary funds to buy those tires later and help win the war now. Let's "Top that Ten Percent."

THINKING STRAIGHT

BY RUTH TAYLOR

In our hurry, in our patriotic fervor, in our zeal to be of service at this critical hour, we must not overlook the fact that there is a need to think as well as act. Just as we drop peace-time luxuries from our lives, just as we concentrate all our efforts on work that will help in winning this war against the powers of darkness—so must we think straight toward our goal, so must we drop fears, prejudices, petty hatreds and personal preferences from our mind.

Now most of all must we learn to think straight. Elmer Davis, the director of War Information, made a statement some time ago which every one of us who fight for democracy must well remember: "Not only does our future and probably the world's future, depend on our ability to fight straight on through to victory, it depends as well on our ability to think straight through to the end of the war and afterwards."

This is a time of complete reorientation. We must realize that even history is speeded up these days. The changes that are taking place are rapid and we must be able to keep up with them mentally, and adjust ourselves to the idea that the way we had thought things out may not be the best way to work things through.

We must ruthlessly discard old habits of thought. We must think in broader terms. We must praise the right action—no matter who does it; and we must condemn the wrong, no matter whose it is. We must not detour for selfish motives, whether that selfishness be a selfishness of an individual or a group. We must think straight through toward the high end of victory both of the war and of the peace, and we must recognize the source of all efforts to divide us and create hates and dissension.

We must not be led astray by those who are seeking their own personal gain or the fulfillment of their ambition in this war, or the satisfaction of their grudges and hates. We cannot even afford to spend time hating them. We have our job to do—and we must think straight to it.

We have a mental code to guide us. The Four Freedoms are not just a statement of national policy, but a challenge to all of us, a call to the minds of men to think straight to these goals, and to put them into practical application—not merely at some future date when victory rests on our banners, but here and now in our daily lives.

The war will be won by those who have fought straight through to the victory of the United Nations. The peace will be won by those who have thought straight through to the victory of the Four Freedoms.
